Lancaster Farming

VOL. 30 No. 46 | Four Sections | Lancaster Farming, Saturday, September 21, 1985 | $7.50 per Year

By the Board Foot!

Even in Lancaster County, where corn is traditionally "as high as an elephant's eye," Roy Erb's backyard corn plot is a real head turner.

Erb, of Brook Lawn Farm north of Lancaster, planted some novelty seed from Mexico around the first of May. To date, the stalks are an estimated 16 feet tall (the "yard-stick" in the photo is a 12-footer) and still growing.

"I believe it'll go to 17 or 18 feet 'til it's done," he predicts. Would the veteran Lancaster County farmer want to harvest 100 acres of this skyscraping variety? "If it lays down I wouldn't want any part of it," he smiles.

August milk production up 9.7% over 1984 output

BY JAMES H. EVERHART

WASHINGTON — U.S. milk production rose once again in August, surpassing year-earlier levels by an incredible 9.7 percent, USDA officials said.

The increase marks the sixth consecutive month in which production exceeded 1984 figures for the month. Moreover, the increases have grown larger each month, beginning with a 1.2 percent increase in March.

Production in August was 12.291 billion pounds, up from the 11.206 billion recorded in August 1983. The figure was, however, about 100 million pounds less than the record-high production levels achieved in June and July.

Cow numbers continued their steady increase, jumping 33,000 from month-earlier levels, to 11.1 million. Production per cow jumped 6.8 percent, to 1,107 pounds.

In Pennsylvania, milk production went up eight percent, to 847 million pounds, while New York recorded a seven-percent increase in August.

Much larger increases were noted in the other top five milk-producing states, according to USDA figures. Minnesota led the majors with a 16 percent increase over 1984 totals, while Wisconsin reported a 13-percent hike and California, an eight-percent increase.

Among the other states, Florida's dairymen increased their production by 19 percent, Illinois farmers, by 14 percent, and Arizona's producers, by 12 percent.

Lackawanna County Extension Director Tom Jurchak said he thought the production increases would continue to grow for the foreseeable future. The reason, he said, was that feed prices are low — and will probably be low for quite some time, as a result of 1985's bumper crop of feed grains here and in the Midwest.

He said lowering the support price to $11.10 — one of the many approaches being considered now in Congress — might not be enough to slow down production.

Dauphin County farmer appeals 'clean and green' assessments

BY JAMES H. EVERHART

HARRISBURG — The chairman of the Dauphin County Conservation District has filed an appeal that challenges the county's reassessment of agricultural land enrolled in the statewide Clean and Green Assessment Program.

DCCD Chairman Russ Cassel is filing the appeal for his 290-acre dairy farm in South Hanover Township. But he anticipates that any ruling would affect all of the county's participants in the program.

Cassel is challenging the county Board of Assessment's 1985 Reassessment, which, in effect, simply doubled 1973 assessments of all real estate in the county.

Even though ag land would be valued the same, relative to other property in the county, Cassel contends the reassessment does not comply with the terms of the 1974 act which created the program.

The land, he contends, should only be reassessed on the use value of the property, which, he says, has not doubled since 1973 — and may, in fact, have dropped.

His proposal would continue the ag land at 100 percent of the 1973 assessment levels rather than the 200 percent set by the assessment board for all Dauphin County real estate. If accepted by the board, his plan would actually lower taxes paid by farmers participating in the program.

The appeal could have wide-ranging impact on similar reassessments in other counties. The Dauphin County Board of Commissioners has adopted a resolution in support of Cassel's appeal.

The issue is complicated slightly by the assessment history. Though the last countywide assessment occurred in 1973, the figures for the affected ag properties were established in 1976, when the county established its Clean and Green Program.

Unlike the procedure followed in 1976, this year's assessment was not based on the use value of the land, Cassel says. It did not use information from the State Department of Agriculture, or from soil surveys conducted by Penn State, the National Cooperative Soil Survey, or the U.S. Census of Agricultural Categories of Land Use.

"The doubling of the Clean and Green Program's use-values for the 1985 reassessment cannot be justified," Cassel wrote in his appeal. "The law and the rules and regulations mandate a two-step process which the assessor must follow in determining preferential assessments.

"The assessor is obligated not

Tobacco Auction to hold meeting

BLUE BALL — The first in a series of tobacco growers' meetings is scheduled for Sept. 24, 7:30 p.m., at the Blue Ball School. The school is located on Ewell Road, one-half mile east of Blue Ball between Route 322 and 23.

Sponsored by Pa. Tobacco Auction Inc., the meeting will acquaint growers with procedures for selling tobacco through the newly organized auction. PTA officers will be on hand to answer questions.

According to auction manager Eric Probst, more weekly meetings throughout Lancaster County will be scheduled, with dates and locations to be announced at a later date.

Grubb hearings slated Sept. 30 in Senate

Richard E. Grubb

BY JAMES H. EVERHART

HARRISBURG — The State Senate's Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee will hold hearings Monday, Sept. 30, on Dr. Richard E. Grubb's nomination as state Secretary of Agriculture.

Senate sources indicated that little opposition to Grubb has surfaced, despite criticism of the nomination by the Pennsylvania Farmer's Association.

PFA is opposing the Grubb nomination, citing the nominee's lack of experience in production agriculture, his unfamiliarity with current ag issues and inexperience in state-level politics. Other farm organizations, including the state Grange, have endorsed the choice.

Asked about the nomination process this week, Grubb said he

Delmarva Poultry

Thursday, September 19
Report supplied by USDA

Market Comment: Demand for ready to cook whole was quite disappointing and clearances at current asking prices were difficult in several quarters. Inquiry for parts was little better, and discounting was prevalent at most parts. Breast meat continued to clear best, but even here demand was slowing. Live supplies were at least fully adequate. Weights remained mixedd in a full range but more desirable. Slaughter schedules were again moderately heavy. The undertone was weak and unsettled.

Today's L.T.L. asking prices were 2 cents lower on U.S. Grade A at 47-55 cents.

Estimated slaughter of broiler fryers in Delmarva (000).

Philadelphia Eggs

Thursday, September 19
Report supplied by USDA

Market Comment: Prices remained unchanged. Trade sentiment although nervous in some quarters continued relatively steady. Distributive movement was noted as on the low side at some plants, better than expected at others, but about moderate in total. Graded supplies were in uneven balance, and volumes were usually held close to requirements. Most traders noted little difficulty in managing spot surplus of additional needs. In ungraded channels packers noted mixed interest in additional stocks centered mainly on heavier weight class ones.

Prices to retailers: sales to volume buyers, consumer grades white eggs in cartons delivered store door:

Eastern Pa. & N.J. Poultry

Wednesday, September 18
Report supplied by USDA

Market Comment: A steady increase in offerings and a sluggish call for processed meat combined to weaken prices. Supplies were more than sufficient to maintain desired schedules. Some finished product was moving into the midwestern area where demand was a bit more active. The undertone was weak and unsettled.

Prices Paid at Farm:

Light Type Hens: .13-.16, mostly .13-.14.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

SEPT. 23-29, 1985

Continual rain, what a pain.

Water young fruit trees generously each week until the ground freezes John Paul Jones proclaimed to the British, I have not yet begun to fight, Sept 23, 1779 Average length of days for the week 11 hours 59 minutes Full moon Sept 28 (Sat.) David O Saylor patented cement, Sept 26, 1871 Daniel Boone died at age 85 Sept 26 1820 After all is said and done more is said than done

Ask the Old Farmer: My friend and I noticed that cows out feeding in the pasture are all facing the same way Is there a reason for this? S B E , Wilton, N H

Yup especially in the coastal sections The critters swing like a vane on the gable of a barn, to head the wind Otherwise the wind will rough up their fur and they don't like it

Home Hints An unused portion of onion will keep well if stored in a tightly covered jar in the refrigerator

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

New England: Week begins with warm temperatures and rain, midweek sunny and cool, showers north, end of week showers, partly cloudy

Greater New York-New Jersey: Rain with cool temperatures at week's beginning, partly cloudy with sprinkles midweek, rain, cool temperatures to end week

Middle Atlantic Coastal: Beginning of week rain with warm temperatures, mid through end of week sunny and pleasant

Proven performers

Patz hook-and-eye links have proven their value over the years. The forged steel links provide strength and durability. The Patz link design provides chain flexibility that takes sprocket, corners and elevations smoothly for layout flexibility and minimum wear.

Choose the Model 400 (blue) link with more than 2 pounds of steel, or choose the thicker XH (red) link for longer pulls and heavier loads.

Progression forging builds extra strength into hook-and-eye link contact points. Final heat treating increased hardness, strength and wear resistance. Patz links withstand corrosion for long chain life.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Be Careful During Silo Filling

Two problems are occurring during this silo filling season as a result of the excellent growing year. One is overloading wagons causing broken spindles, twisted frames and bent axles. Corn silage is heavy this year and overloaded wagons crossing ditches and ruts in fields causes excessive strain on equipment. If your wagon is full when only half way around the field, change wagons; the "down time" making repairs is more costly than the time to change wagons.

The other problem is "silo gas." We are receiving a lot of calls concerning silo gas. These gases can develop from one to 14 days after the silo is filled. Most of these gases have a chlorine-laundry bleach odor. Some are yellow and some are colorless. Don't take any chances–never enter a partly filled silo without running the blower for at least 15 minutes. These gases are heavier than air and will come down the chute into the barn. Be careful around recently filled silos.

To Beware of Frosted Chips

Colder weather means frost. In fact this is good news to many of us who have had enough of hot humid weather this summer. Livestock producers who have fields of sudan-sorghum hybrids should keep in mind that when frost hits these crops they could be toxic to livestock for seven to 10 days following the freeze. After this period, and the plants are dead. they may be used safely. However, any growth coming from the plant after a killing frost might also be toxic.

Another frost hazard would be to permit livestock to graze alfalfa or clover stands while the frost is still on the plant. This can cause severe bloating. Allow the frost to melt and the plants to dry before grazing. Good management is needed on various forage crops after a killing frost.

To Control Weeds in New Alfalfa

Recent growing conditions have favored the growth of alfalfa and weeds. In many cases the broadleaf weeds will crowd out the small alfalfa plants, if not controlled. Early seedlings of alfalfa without a nurse crop need some weed protection.

One practice suggested in the Agronomy Guide is to spray with 2,4-D B when the weeds are one inch tall. This will knock out the broadleaf weeds without harming the alfalfa plants.

If the weeds are permitted to develop larger, they will be hard to kill without hurting the alfalfa. Alfalfa seeding is an expensive practice; this investment needs protection by controlling the weeds. Many good stands of alfalfa have been ruined by excessive weed growth.

To Store Pesticides Safely

Most producers are about finished with their spray materials for the year. Many of these can be held over until next year with good results. However, it is always best to purchase only enough for one season at a time.

When storing spray materials, always keep them in their original container and away from children, pets and livestock. It's recommended to have a separate room or building for pesticide storage. Wettable powders are easy to store; however, emulsions and liquids may be harmed by freezing weather.

Producers are urged to follow the label instructions in this respect. It may be necessary to keep some of them in a heated building. Be sure they are not near feed supplies because accidents can happen. Pesticides kept in a room or building under lock is a good way to prevent costly mistakes and tragedies.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W ALTHOUSE

NO LONGER CHILDREN

September 22, 1985

Background Scripture:
Ephesians 4:1-16.
Devotional Reading:
2 Corinthians 9:6-15.

Let's think of the Church for a moment as a person somewhere between birth and old age. The Church has probably finished with its infancy, but just where is it these days: childhood, adolescence, youth, middle age, maturity, or its senior years? For the Church is intended to grow up and not just grow old. "We are to grow up in every way into him who is the head, into Christ..." (Ephesians 4:15).

That is the plan, but what is the reality?

There are some who might hold that the Church is still in its childhood. The writer of Ephesians gives us a rule-of-thumb by which we may make that evaluation: "so that we may no longer be children, tossed to and fro and carried about with every kind of doctrine, by the cunning of men, by their craftiness...(4:14).

TO AND FRO

The evidence seems pretty compelling for the childhood of the Church. We are still being "tossed to and fro and carried about by every wind of doctrine..." Although we have taken some long strides in the direction of ecumenicity - eliminating the barriers that separate us - Christendom is more divided by its winds of doctrine than united by them. Although we speak and sing of "One Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of us all," we pretty much conduct our church lives as if we each followed a different God and Father.

A few weeks ago, I attended a concert in the Roman Catholic parish in [illegible] Austrian alpine town of Bad G[illegible] and waited for the concert to be[illegible], I mused on the ironies of the situation. The choir presenting the concert was from Dallas, Texas. They were singing in a Christian Church and presumably we were all Christians together. But the local people attending spoke German, not English. Furthermore, the church was Roman Catholic and so different from the church life to which I am accustomed.

HIS GIFTS

What a mixture of languages, nationalities, and religious experience we were! What diversity! And actually it is the same diversity of which Ephesians is speaking when the writer talked about the variety of gifts in the Church. Each one, by the grace of God, has something to contribute, something to share, some means of ministering to others. The sheer diversity of these gifts makes it seem impossible that there can be any oneness.

Yet, the source of this diversity is a oneness and the end to which it is intended to lead us is also a unity. The source of our diversity and its gifts is "one Lord, one God and Father of us all." And the goal to which we were intended to move is this same unity: "until we all attain to the unity of faith,...to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ" (4:13).

It would seem we still have a long way to go until we are "no longer children."

Harvesting, fall plowing underway throughout state

HARRISBURG – Harvesting activities for the Pennsylvania apple crop were about at the halfway point during the week ending September 15, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service. Meanwhile, harvest of the Commonwealth's pear and grape crop continued on schedule.

According to the Service, five days were rated suitable for fieldwork. Activities for the week included harvesting potatoes, tomatoes, pumpkins, sweet corn, hay, corn silage and tobacco; and some fall plowing.

Topsoil moisture statewide was 41 percent short and 59 percent adequate. Northern region reporters rated soil moisture 30 percent short and 70 percent adequate. Southern reporters rated soil moisture supplies 36 percent short and 64 percent adequate.

Overall Pennsylvania corn crop condition was rated 45 percent excellent, 39 percent good, 13 percent fair and three percent poor. Statewide, four percent of the corn crop was reported in the silk stage, 28 percent in dough, 58 percent dented and 10 percent mature. Last year at this time, corn was reported as six percent in silk, 44 percent in dough, 45 percent in dent and five percent mature. Northern reporters rated the crop as 50 percent excellent, 27 percent good, 18 percent fair and five percent poor. Central reporters rated corn as 44 percent excellent, 44 percent good, 10 percent fair and two percent poor. Southern reporters rated corn as 44 percent excellent, 40 percent good, 13 percent fair, two percent poor and one percent very poor. The harvest of corn silage was reported to be 18 percent complete statewide.

Statewide, the condition of soybeans was rated 36 percent excellent, 49 percent good, 13 percent fair and two percent poor.

The harvest of potatoes was reported to be 72 percent complete, compared to 52 percent complete last year at this time. Northern, central and southern region reporters indicate harvesting rates of 56, 80 and 77 percent, respectively.

HOWARD®

PARAPLOW® Model 1810
Loosens Soil Without Surface Disturbance

Impossible? It's true. The new Howard PARAPLOW loosens soil to 14 inches deep without disturbing surface residues. It breaks compaction while leaving trash on top to save topsoil from wind and water erosion. The secret is the PARAPLOW's unique "legs." The Model 1810 has 5 or 6 of them which slice into the ground at a 45° angle to gently lift, fracture and loosen. No other tillage tool works the same way. See your nearby Howard dealer.

Because every farm is different, we develop different alfalfa varieties.

Your farm is different from that of your neighbor; different soil types, perhaps, or different disease and insect problems. And that may be the best reason yet for using Pioneer® brand alfalfa seed in your individual alfalfa management program.

Thanks to our large and continuing alfalfa research effort, you have a number of different varieties to choose from. There's one that will fit your farm better than any other variety you can buy; and that's the one you should be planting to maximize your long-term alfalfa yields.

Which one? Well, your Pioneer sales representative will be glad to match one of these varieties to your farm conditions and help you start getting more alfalfa from every field on your farm. So give him a call. He's right down the road.

Living, Learning & Planting
PIONEER®
BRAND SEEDS

Your best start.

526

As proven in tests, 526 is one of the most winterhardy varieties on the market. It also features outstanding resistance to Bacterial Wilt and good resistance to Fusarium Wilt. 526 produces impressive yields throughout this area and, since the first cutting is a bit later than with 531 or 532, the harvest load can be easily spread.

531

With its ability to tolerate Anthracnose infestations and fight off Fusarium Wilt and Bacterial Wilt, 531 is quickly becoming a favorite in areas where these diseases are a problem. It produces a first cutting early and the fine stemmed, leafy plants bounce back fast after harvest — providing ton after ton of high quality forage.

532

532 establishes a stand quickly and its fast regrowth can mean an extra cutting each season. Strong resistance to Bacterial Wilt and Fusarium Wilt, along with very good field tolerance against Phytophthora Root Rot, all go into making 532 one tough, winterhardy alfalfa variety.

Welks return to winners' circle at Solanco Holstein Show

BY WENDY WEHR

QUARRYVILLE — Two outstanding Welk-Crest entries copped the top honors in Thursday's Holstein competition at the Solanco Fair.

Paul Welk, Holstein breeder from Peach Bottom, exhibited Welk-Crest Jemini Belinda to the grand championship, while his son Matt showed his two-year-old, Welk-Crest Locust Leanne, for the reserve grand champion open honors as well as the champion youth division award.

This is the fourth year in a row that Welk and his sons have shown the grand champions. However, Welk said he wasn't overly confident going into the show, having sold last year's grand champion at the prestigious All-American Sale.

"It will be different now that we sold our champion cow," Welk had told some fellow exhibitors prior to Thursday's show-ring activities. But his homebred show string came through, giving him the championships as well as Solanco's premier breeder and premier exhibitor banners.

The Belinda cow is a four-year-old sired by Shardale Arlinda Chief Jemini. Judge Steve Shaw of Linden-Loch Holsteins, Oley Valley, described her as having "no faults," and a super fancy udder.

The Welk-Crest entry was also reserve grand champion and best-bred-and-owned at this summer's Lancaster County show.

Belinda is scored VG-85, although she will be classified for her second time in December. Also to her credit is a production record of 21,000 pounds of 4 percent milk and 810 pounds fat.

Eleven-year-old Matthew Welk's reserve grand champion is a Locust-Glen Ivanhoe Elevation daughter. Leanne was also reserve grand champion in the county 4-H show this year.

The Little Britain fifth-grader also earned the champion showing and fitting award in Thursday's competition.

Junior Champions

While Welk-Crest entries dominated the cow classes, animals carrying the Sukavin prefix took the Holstein show junior championships.

Karen Kauffman's favorite Sukavin Persuader Holly easily earned the junior champion rosette and much praise from the judge.

"Whenever a heifer like this walks into the ring, the judge just has to be happy," said Shaw. "She shows correctness from her nose to her toes."

Holly is a senior yearling sired by Plushanski Persuader. Karen, the daughter of Robert and Susan Kauffman Jr., Peach Bottom, has shown the heifer to some previous wins, including the junior championships at the county Holstein and 4-H shows and last year's reserve youth championship at Solanco.

In the reserve junior champion position stood Sukavin Wiseman Rhea. This intermediate calf was shown by Mike Mellott, an FFA student who works for the Kauffmans.

This is the first time the Killdee Astrochief Wiseman daughter had entered a show ring, so Mellott was pleased to earn the reserve title.

Other winners in Thursday's Holstein show included Diane Hershberger, who showed her aged cow to the reserve youth championship, and Rodney Griest, who was named champion showman and fitter amidst stiff competition in the age 13 and over category.

Colored breeds

Wednesday's dairy competition at the Solanco Fair included quality Jersey, Ayrshire and Guernsey shows.

The Arrowsmith family made a comeback with their Hillacres Jerseys, taking three open championships and the premier breeder banner for the colored breeds.

The son of William and Geraldine Arrowsmith of Peach Bottom, Tom also showed the junior champion, Hillacres Samson Delilah. On hand to help Tom, and show some of their own first-place winners during the show, were sisters Sarah, age 18, and Helen, 15.

Jenny Harnish showed the reserve junior champion of the Jersey show, Valley U Muffin, an intermediate calf sired by Wilderness Deninger ET.

In the Solanco Ayrshire show, Robert and Sharon Nolan, Parkesburg, Chester County, returned with a winner. Tower View Jerry's Candice, reserve grand champion in last year's show, earned the grand champion trophy on Wednesday.

Another Tower View Jeremy daughter, Dreamnol Jeremy's Catarina, earned the junior championship for the Nolan's. This entry was a homebred senior yearling.

Karen Hambrick showed her homebred Pinelane Star Megan, a four-year-old, to the reserve grand championship.

Karen, a sister to Warren Schmuck, helped earn him the premier exhibitor award of the colored breed shows.

Max Brommer showed the reserve junior champion Ayrshire in open competition and the reserve champion in youth competition. Fred Esbenshade picked up the youth division championship with his Unicorn H.K. Diamond.

With only a few entries in the Solanco Guernsey show, Steven Wagner showed his two-year-old to the senior and grand championship and his senior calf to the reserve junior championship. Elam W. Mull had the junior and reserve grand champion, the senior yearling.

Judging the colored breed shows on Wednesday was Peter Witmer, Guernsey breeder from Willow Street.

MacCauleys win twice in sheep show

Solanco Fair

BY JACK HUBLEY

QUARRYVILLE — If it's worth doing, it's worth doing right. That about sums up the philosophy of Atglen's MacCauley family when it comes to raising sheep.

And the Solanco Fair's sheep breeding show was yet another opportunity for 14-year-old Donna MacCauley to emphasize that the family does indeed do things right.

When the fair's three breeding shows had come to a close, the daughter of Joan and Bill MacCauley had captured top honors in two-thirds of them, exhibiting the grand champion Suffolk and Cheviot ewes as well as the show's top Suffolk ram. All of the winning entries were bred at home where the family maintains a flock of about 75 sheep.

Though the MacCauleys are best known for producing prize-winning Suffolks, Donna added Cheviots to the flock a few years ago. "They're easier to handle," said the Octoraro ninth grader, whose petite, all-white Cheviots are a counterpoint to the lanky black-faced Suffolks.

In Shropshire competition, the show belonged to Leonard Brown III of Kirkwood. Winning the show has become an annual event for this Solanco High School junior, the son of Leonard and Mary Jane Brown.

With no grand champion being named in the fair's market lamb competition, 18-year-old Deb Martin of Conestoga became the show's undeclared double champion by winning both the lightweight and heavyweight divisions with a pair of purebred Suffolks.

A recent graduate of Penn Manor, the daughter of Melvin and Dorothy Martin admits that keeping her 15 Suffolks in groceries is no small task. "It's an expensive hobby," she says "I work two jobs just to feed my sheep."

Judging this year's sheep events was York County Extension agent Johanna Geiger.

4-H steer is Solanco grand champion

BY JACK HUBLEY

QUARRYVILLE — Lancaster County Extension livestock agent Chet Hughes ought to be flattered. His namesake is tall, dark and good-looking. And, to top it off, he was named grand champion market steer during the Solanco Fair's final round of beef judging that saw the cream of the FFA and 4-H shows vying for the overall title.

Named "Chetty", the fair's top beef was shown by Tracey Landis, daughter James and Linda Landis of Quarryville. The name can hardly be considered coincidental, since Tracey bought her purebred Angus steer from Hughes last fall.

"He caught my eye–he had a lot of style," said the exhibitor, recalling her reasons for choosing the March steer. Sired by Independence, the 1,330-pound steer was out of a Power Play daughter that happened to be the first heifer that Hughes ever raised.

Judge Bill Holloway, of GH2 Angus Associates, put Chetty at the top of his heavyweight class before naming him champion 4-H steer, and finally grand champion of the show.

The grand champion title turned out to be one of only a few beef titles that eluded Quarryville's Frey family on Thursday night. Fritz Frey, 18, collected champion honors in the 4-H heifer show and FFA steer show earlier in the evening, before earning the reserve overall spot behind Landis.

Anna Marie Frey shared the spotlight with her brother by showing her heifer to reserve champion honors, and capped the evening by placing first in the showmanship contest's senior division.

A homegrown steer, Fritz Frey's 1,265-pound reserve grand champion was the product of one of the family's fullblood Chianina bulls and an Angus cow.

In the heifer show, which serves as the county's 4-H Heifer Roundup, the brother-sister Frey team took both champion and reserve honors

At the top was Twin Oak Blackbird 2004, an April, 1984 Foolish Pride daughter bred and owned by Fritz. At reserve was Twin Oak Georginia 1184, a High Pockets daughter born March, 1984 out of one of the family's first-calf heifers, and shown by Anna Marie. Show results follow

Tracey Landis and "Chetty" were the proud owners of the grand championship trophy after winning Solanco's FFA steer show.

Fritz Frey's champion FFA steer was named overall reserve grand champion in competition that followed the FFA and 4-H steer shows.

The Frey family scored twice in the county's 4-H Heifer Roundup. Twin Oak Blackbird earned champion honors for Fritz and Twin Oak Georginia took reserve for Anna Marie.

Top hog is 'head and shoulders' above the rest

BY JACK HUBLEY

QUARRYVILLE — Chester County Extension agent Cheryl Fairbairn had no trouble making her final selection in the championship round of Solanco's Market Hog show on Thursday. Describing her champion as a "thick, nicely balanced hog with a lot of volume," Fairbairn concluded that Beth Kauffman's 235-pound barrow stood "head and shoulders above the rest."

"I won't get much sleep tonight," beamed the 14-year-old after Fairbairn gave her the nod for top honors.

The daughter of Robert and Susan Kauffman, Peach Bottom, Beth's prize porker was one of four she had purchased from swine breeder Jim Parlett of Airville, York County. Of the original quartet, she selected two for the Solanco show, and her six years of showring experience paid off with her second entry placing first in its class.

Beth Kauffman's 235-pound Spot-cross takes a bow for the audience after being named champion market hog by judge Cheryl Fairbairn (left).

Solanco Fair

This was a big day for the Solanco High School student who also placed third in her class in Holstein competition earlier in the day. But most exhibitors will agree that a night's sleep is a small price to pay—even on a school night—for a championship trophy.

Eleven-year-old Matt Welk from Peach Bottom was another 4-H'er who had a big day. After taking reserve honors in the Holstein show earlier on Thursday, the son of Paul and Bev Welk went on to take the same title in the Market Hog show.

Matt Welk chalked up two reserve champion wins at Solanco: one in the hog show and another in open Holstein competition.

Results of the show, including showmanship and fitting competitions, are listed below. The competition's champion senior showman received a pair of feeder pigs compliments of Farm Credit of Quarryville. Sam and Vickie Long of New Providence awarded two feeder pigs to the junior champion showman.

McSparran tells producers to expect price cuts

GORDONVILLE — Dairy producers should expect more price cuts in the immediate future, Inter-State Milk Producers Cooperative. President Robert McSparran told the District 6 annual dinner meeting here Tuesday night.

"No question about it, there are too many cows and too much milk," McSparran said.

A price cut, he said, is the quickest way for the political system to respond to the growing surpluses of milk.

"But it will take several 50-cent price cuts to get purchases down to a level the government will find acceptable."

Government purchases in this fiscal year have already totaled 12 billion pounds, he said, even though the diversion program was in effect for six months.

And though the current administration has said it won't accept a diversion program, he said, the program did work in this area, cutting surpluses in half.

Northeastern farmers cannot ignore what goes on in other parts of the country, he said, because the dairy surplus is a nationwide problem.

"We cannot be an isle of calm in a sea of distress," he added.

The dairy industry should work hard to stand on its own two feet, he noted, even on the world market. Producers will be a lot better off in the long run, if they do.

"We don't expect the government to support us all the time," he said. "We'd just like to have them as a safety net, when times get bad."

As part of the evening's activities, District 6 Director Roy H. Book honored Melvin J. and Geneva Martin of Gap for their 50 years of membership in the cooperative.

Roy Book, District 6 director, makes a presentation to Melvin J. and Geneva Martin, who have been members of Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative for 50 years.

Lefevers celebrate 200th

1985 is indeed a year of celebration for the Donald J. Lefever family of Manheim. In the wall of Lefever's limestone farmhouse are a pair of stones inscribed with "17" and "85", offering "etched in stone" proof of this year's 200th anniversary. The family, too, has called this 70-acre farm home for the past two centuries, says Donald's son, Bruce Lefever, of Lititz.

Tie between researcher and farmer questioned

UNIVERSITY PARK – The future effectiveness and scope of the American agricultural technology delivery system hinges on how well publicly-funded research reaches the public, according to a Penn State study.

"The American system of publicly-funded agricultural research and cooperative extension has contributed significantly to long-term increases in agricultural productivity and has yielded high social rates of return," the national three-year study states.

However, the scientific vitality of the system has, in the last fifteen years, been questioned, says Dr. Irwin Feller, professor of economics and director of Penn State's Institute for Policy Research and Evaluation.

As the agricultural research system has moved to strengthen its basic research orientation, the linkages that connect the research lab and the farm are being strained, says Feller.

He and a team of Penn State researchers learned that the linkages connecting the technology delivery system are being weakened because the agricultural research system is trying to achieve expertise in "two dissimilar directions--basic research and technology transfer."

"Similarly, the land-grant system is trying to maintain articulation between experiment station and cooperative extension programs as each organization seeks to respond to multiple and at times divergent pressures," the study states.

The future of public sector research and extension organizations, Feller maintains, is going to suffer unless strong links are maintained between the two components.

The study also describes changes under way in several land-grant universities and within USDA–Science and Education that are designed to foster closer linkages between research and extension programs.

Feller directed the national three-year study, awarded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Science and Education Administration to Penn State. It was "designed to answer congressional questions on the organization of agricultural research and technology transfer by the USDA, land-grant universities, state experiment stations and cooperative extension services," he says.

The study was also designed to provide a foundation for guiding future food and agricultural technology policies, including intergovernmental policies.

"We looked at how the historic partnerships of the USDA and the land-grant universities in agricultural research and cooperative extension are responding to new developments in science," he said.

The study also addressed how these organizations relate to private industry as it increases its activity in agricultural research and technology transfer. It also focused on the relationship of these groups to other research organizations.

Feller, along with Dr. J. Patrick Madden, professor of agricultural economics; Dr. Dan Moore, associate professor of rural sociology extension; Dr. Laura Sims, associate professor of nutrition in public health; and D. Lynne Kaltreider, research assistant for the institute, comprised the interdisciplinary team.

The institute's research team interviewed federal officials, representatives of colleges of agriculture, state agricultural research experiment stations and cooperative extension service personnel at 1862 and 1890 land-grant universities in nine states. They also interviewed representatives of related public and private organizations in the course of the study.

The study cites human nutrition as one area where organizational patterns hamper the linkages. Human nutrition research directions may be weakening the ties between the research priorities and those involved in developing programs based on new research findings.

Dauphin farmer appeals only to determine classifications of particular lands as to their soils, but also must adopt a methodology which considers evidence demonstrating the productivity of the land devoted to a particular use.

"This methodology was used in establishing the initial use values in 1976 when the program was instituted in Dauphin County. It was clearly not used in the 1985 reassessment."

Cassel noted in his appeal that use values have not risen in agriculture since 1976, and, in fact, net farm income has dropped by 57 percent, according to the Pennsylvania Dairy Farm Business Analysis Yearly Financial Summaries.

He also provided information on expenses for farm operations, with additional data on farm prices.

The Dauphin County Board of Assessment Appeals is expected to act on Cassel's appeal by the end of October.

expected to be confirmed. He added that he did not think the nomination was a personal attack, but rather reflected PFA's commitment to its own guidelines for a secretary of agriculture.

He has looked on the confirmation process, he said, "as someone else's job. My job is to run the department, and that's what I've been doing," he said.

Most observers expected the acting scretary to be confirmed, barring introduction of any damaging testimony or revelations at Monday's hearings.

"While PFA is highly respected, most Senators seem to support a governor's right to pick his own cabinet," a Senate source said.

Richard Newpher, secretary-treasurer of PFA, said his organization's opposition was based on criteria that have been a part of the PFA's bylaws for more than a decade. The three points of opposition, he noted, paraphrase those provisions.

He noted that PFA had suggested several other possible nominees, including several within the department as well as a few experienced legislators.

"He must be a very good person," Newpher said of Grubb, "especially considering the responsible position he held at Penn State."

However, he noted, considering the size and complexity of the department and the issues facing agriculture today, "It's very difficult to walk in there from the outside and have everybody pulling together."

Newpher added that reports of recent dissention and staff unrest within the department are confirmation of PFA's misgivings about Grubb. He said he thought it would take a year for an "outsider" like Grubb to become familiar with the ways of Harrisburg.

"We need a strong Department of Agriculture," he said, "and I'm not sure a newcomer can keep things going without missing a step."

Grubb, a former vice president and professor at Penn State University, has been the acting ag secretary since June 10. He replaced Penrose Hallowell, who resigned this spring after serving in Thornburgh's cabinet for six years.

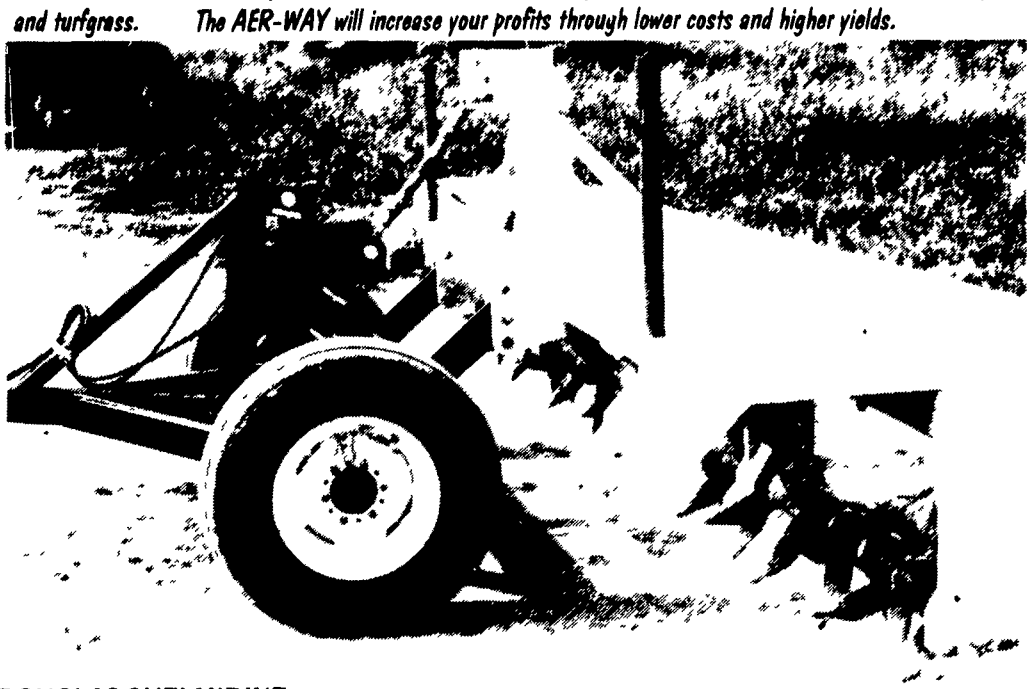
The Senate has 25 legislative days to act on the nomination, or it will be considered approved. Because of the summer recess, that time period will not expire until Oct. 8, committee sources said.

Individuals or groups who would like to offer testimony relevant to the nomination are asked to notify the Senate Ag Committee by 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, and deliver 20 copies of written testimony by 4 p.m. Friday.

Aer Way™

THE BETTER WAY
TO REVITALIZE THE SOIL AND INCREASE YIELD

The AER-WAY is an utility implement that relieves compaction, aerates, cultivates and renovates. It can function as a rotary hoe, a disc, a roller and a harrow. It saves fuel, time and fertilizer. It increases water percolation, bacterial life and root growth. it is an implement for pastureland, grassland, horse paddocks, general field crops, vegetable production, orchards, vineyards and turfgrass. The AER-WAY will increase your profits through lower costs and higher yields.



DOUGLAS SHELMIDINE, Sheland Farms Belleville N Y Owned by Donald and Douglas Shelmidine
"We just bought our Aer-way but we saw what it could do for us this spring when we rented one We saw that our heavier soils worked much better if we made one pass early before discing We plan to use it to incorporate manure on our corn and hay crops It will help us get the solids from the slurred manure into the soil "
"We've owned our Aer way a little over a year now We bought it for incorporating manure on our hay crop stands We ended up using it this spring to incorporate and do spring time tillage on corn ground We found the tool very effective low cost and it eliminated a great deal of wet soil compaction which other tools always gave us We have recently started using the Aer way tine harrow in combination with aeration of alfalfa It is removing seedling dandelions and seems to do minimal injury to the alfalfa "

IMPROVING PASTURELANDS
How To Do It Suggestions

Since the old plants have not fared very well getting the job done, it wouldn't make much sense to "send a small boy to do a grown man's job" (Quoted from Peter Bannan, Inventor of the AerWay™, Dairyman, New Zealand) That's how Peter characterizes no-till pasture seeding

It is necessary to prepare the soil to receive and nuture a root system that will support a mature, highly productive plant The tine on the AerWay™ will penetrate and loosen to seven inches in depth By adjusting the offset of the rollers of the AerWay™ and using multiple passes it is possible to loosen 90% of the soil in as few as two passes with optimal soil moisture conditions.

The application of lime and potash fertilizer before plants require calcium, magnesium and potassium is always advisable. Adding nitrogen (especially if there is significant crop residue including roots of old plants) will enhance decomposition. Phosphorus will stimulate early root growth Always use reliable soil test results as your guide.

Applying seed can be as expensive and sophisticated as a no-till seeder or drill, or as simple and low-cost as a broadcaster The Aer-Way™ can be equipped with a simple, yet effective, gravity-flow seeder or a precision seeder The precisioin seeder can band fertilizer with the grass seed These attachments when combined with proper seeding timing are very effective; weather conditions for grasses and legumes, of course, being very different.

The standard rear hitch attachment also allows using other seeding equipment in tandem with the AerWay™

Mechanical tomato harvester saves Mowrers time, money

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

MARIETTA – Robert and Donald Mowrer have taken some of the uncertainty and hard work out of growing tomatoes by purchasing a mechanical harvester. The machine, in its first year of use by the Mowrers, saves tremendously on labor costs, because picking time is reduced.

With the first season behind them, the Mowrers are happy with the results. They do not plant the tomatoes in partnership but have always shared in the harvesting and transporting. In previous years they have planted about 13 acres of tomatoes, but with the promise of the mechanical harvester they planted 60 acres between them this year.

Bob farms near Marietta, and Don farms near Maytown in western Lancaster County.

The mechanical harvester still requires a lot of people. To operate at peak capacity, about 10 people are required to ride the machine, looking for foreign objects and decayed fruit. However, Don points out that before they had the picker they would hire 20 workers and it would take all day to fill one trailer for the trip to the cannery. With mechanization, about 12-13 people can fill a trailer in about two hours.

The picker moves through the field with its rotary blades reaching under the plant and cutting it. Then the entire plant travels up a belt and the fruit and vine are separated. The fruit travels across another belt where the workers are looking for stones or bad tomatoes and the vine is discarded out the back of the machine. The tomatoes continue across the belt and up an elevator which deposits them in a trailer being driven alongside the harvester.

Two conscientious drivers must be working together. Occasionally there are problems with a plant getting tied up, and then the harvester must stop. Bob notes, "We've had no major problems. One shaft came off and we had to have a new one made, but it has run pretty smoothly."

He added, "You get a better quality tomato and you need less help with the harvester. It sure beats hand picking." Much of the help now comes from family whereas previously they had to hire workers from Lancaster City.

With pickers going through the fields there was always some damage to vines as well as some areas which didn't get picked as closely as others. With the harvester, there is one trip through the field and everything is harvested at one time.

The tomatoes are round, firm, and fairly uniform in size. The variety is selected for pulp and firmness, since most of the crop will be used in sauces. Spraying is done to ensure uniform ripening, although Bob says that early in the harvest the workers must discard green tomatoes.

Don points out that they get docked pretty hard for loads that have stones or unacceptable tomatoes.

The one unpleasant note in this year's tomato harvest is that the price is down. Don said that processors are able to purchase imported products, already processed, cheaper than purchasing tomatoes from the field here. Obviously it makes for a tough marketing situation.

This tomato harvester travels through the field picking all the tomatoes in one trip. Workers riding the machine sort through, picking out debris and decaying tomatoes. A trailer travels alongside the harvester, receiving the tomatoes as they finish their route through the machine.

The harvest is sometimes held up because the processor is not taking more tomatoes, and they must wait for trailers. These tomatoes are shipped to Fuhrman Company in Northumberland, and Don usually does the driving of the trailer loads to the plant.

So far they have no regrets at having purchased the machine, one of about three being used currently in this area. Don sums up the feeling of the whole family when he says, "It's an experience, but it's a lot less work."

USDA revises cucumber rules

WASHINGTON – In a move aimed at updating a 51-year old grading standard to match 1980's technology, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has revised the voluntary grade standards for greenhouse cucumbers.

John J. Gardner, marketing official with USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, said that cultural and marketing practices have changed to the extent that the previous grade standards for cucumbers, written in 1934, no longer provide industry with realistic means of determining quality or negotiating sales.

The new grade standards for greenhouse cucumbers will:

– delete maturity requirements from all grades;

– establish a definition for "injury" by specific defects for U.S. Fancy grade; – establish minimum standards for cleanliness, defined as practically free from dirt or other foreign material;

– require that U.S. Fancy grade cucumbers be free from cuts, and the U.S. No. 1 and U.S. No. 2 grades be free from unhealed cuts;

– establish a minimum length, unless otherwise specified, that will not be less than 11 inches for all grades;

– redefine the "standard pack" provision to reflect current packing practices;

– set forth definitions for "permanent defects" and "condition defects;" and – update the format for the standards.

Cleanup tips to prevent grain-dust explosions

NEWARK, DE – Mill managers and grain elevator operators are keenly interested in dust control and fire prevention. The occasional explosion that completely destroys a facility and kills or injures several employees is a vivid reminder that dust is highly volatile and that an explosion can occur in any facility if proper precautions are not taken.

According to University of Delaware extension safety specialist Ron Jester, the rash of dust explosions a few years ago and OSHA's subsequent active participation in inspections and rule-making have made elevator operators more aware of potential hazards. Farmers with milling and grain storage operations also have cause for concern.

Since dust, oxygen and a spark in a confined space must all be present to create an explosion, prevention involves removing one of these elements. The best way to reduce the hazard is to eliminate either the dust or the source of ignition, the specialist says.

He suggests farmers and others with grain storage facilities follow these guidelines to minimize the chance of a grain dust explosion:

- Maintain a good housekeeping program. Prevent dust buildup on equipment, pipes, floors and around grinders.
- Be sure dust-tight equipment is really dust-tight. Keep spouts and positive-pressure air ducts in good repair to prevent the escape of dust. Promptly fix leaks in grinding equipment and fans.
- Use a dust-control system to help reduce pressure buildup inside equipment and to keep dust from being forced into the mill.
- Prevent ignition by removing foreign materials from incoming ingredients. Magnets are commonly installed in spouts leading to processing or grinding equipment.
- Lubricate bearings according to manufacturers' recommendations to prevent overheating.
- Align belt drives properly. Misalignment can create friction and sufficient heat to generate a fire.
- Check tension on bucket elevators. Inspect them periodically to ensure proper operation.
- Enforce the no-smoking rule in mill and grain facilities.
- Install dust-tight lights and explosion-proof plug-in receptacles.
- Practice welding safety in the mill. This includes shutting down machinery, cleaning work areas, covering combustible materials with flame-proof tarpaulins and having a fire extinguisher handy.
- Be sure wiring conforms to the National Electrical Code.
- Reduce buildup of static electricity by making positive metal connections between pieces of equipment and the ground.

"It isn't easy to plan, supervise and conduct fire prevention programs and practices," Jester says. "In fact, some managers and employees may actually have a negative attitude about fire prevention. They feel that because they've never had an explosion in their plant, they never will."

But nothing could be further from the truth, the safety specialist warns. Unless proper precautions are taken, there is an ever-increasing danger of explosion or fire.

Moore speaks at meeting

UNIVERSITY PARK – H. Louis Moore, professor of agricultural economics extension at The Pennsylvania State University, spoke at the first joint conference of the Farmstead Equipment Association, Milking Machine Manufacturers Council and International Silo Association held this summer in Chicago.

These groups are affiliated with the Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute. They represent an interest in the state of the agricultural economy, since their sales are dependent on the economic health of farmers.

In his presentation, entitled "What the Future Holds," Moore summed up the events that shaped the agricultural economy this year and gave his prospects for next year. He was somewhat optimistic for the future of agriculture, although he admits the remainder of 1985 and the start of 1986 will be increasingly depressing for the grain sector. But low grain prices, he adds, will create profit opportunities for livestock producers.

Farm Safety Tips

Expert talks about manure storage hazards

BY DENNIS J. MURPHY
Extension Safety Specialist
Penn State University

UNIVERSITY PARK – On-farm storage of animal manure each year is becoming more common in Pennsylvania. Dairy, beef, swine, and veal enterprises are all making increased use of manure storage systems as a part of their operation. With each additional installation, the probability that a fatal accident will result increases.

Tragically, experiences in several states indicate that when an accident does occur, it is likely to involve two or three fatalities. Also, there have been several cases of large numbers of livestock perishing due to manure gases.

There are various types of manure storage systems, and some are more hazardous than others. Below ground storages, or pits, are more hazardous than above ground storages.

Systems that are substantially covered by slotted floors, or have storage lids or caps, are more hazardous than those that have no type of top covering.

Thus, storages that are potentially the most dangerous utilize pits within buildings or directly beneath livestock. Pump-out pits with lids or caps can also be very hazardous.

Manure storage hazards include gases that are toxic (hydrogen sulfide), corrosive (ammonia), asphyxiant (carbon dioxide), and explosive (methane). Drowning is also possible. All of these hazards exist with covered-pit type storages.

Danger is most severe when manure is being agitated or pumped out, and after emptying if the pit is covered.

At other times, gas production is very slight and ventilation from fans or natural air movement usually prevents hazardous buildup of the gases.

Because open storages and above ground tanks are not covered, oxygen depletion and toxic and explosive gas buildup is less likely to occur. Therefore, the only potential hazard normally associated with these systems is drowning.

Hydrogen sulfide is the most hazardous manure gas. It is colorless, heavier than air, and can cause death within seconds at high concentrations. Hydrogen sulfide is identified by a rotten egg odor and can be detected at low levels. However, the sense of smell is deadened from concentrations much less than that which is lethal. Additionally, the smell is often masked by many other smells common to livestock facilities. The amount of the gas can be increased a thousand-fold during agitation and emptying. Hydrogen sulfide is associated with most of the fatalities from manure storages, both human and animal.

Carbon dioxide is a non-toxic gas, but it does replace oxygen and, therefore, can asphyxiate humans and animals. Because it is colorless and odorless, carbon dioxide is impossible to detect without gas detection equipment. Since it is heavier than air, it usually accumulates near the bottom of the storage. Carbon dioxide does not usually build up to the point that it becomes lethal unless all ventilation into and around the pit has been eliminated for a few hours.

Ammonia can cause severe damage to the eyes, throat, and lungs. This gas combines with moisture in the eyes and respiratory tract to form an alkaline base, which results in severe burns. Ammonia is lighter than air and has a strong bleach-like smell. Because of its irritating nature, people usually leave the area quickly. Therefore, it is not suspected to have caused any human deaths. However, constant low-level exposure to ammonia can have a discomforting effect on humans and livestock.

Methane is a highly flammable and explosive gas. It, too, is odorless and colorless, and impossible to detect without gas detection instruments. Methane is lighter than air and readily rises out of storage areas. It can collect under hoods, roof ridges, and corners. It's most likely to accumulate during hot weather if ventilation is poor. There have been a few methane explosions resulting from lighting torches and sparks from a shorted electrical wire.

There are several things an operator can do to minimize hazards associated with stored manure. However, none is more important than keeping people and animals out of buildings and providing strong, constant ventilation during agitation and emptying.

Continue to ventilate for a few hours after pumping has stopped. Ventilation systems should be equipped with alarms to warn of failure, and auxiliary ventilation should be available in case of power failure.

Another recommendation is not to fill your storage to capacity. Allow 1 to 2 feet of air space to accommodate concentrations of gases. Also, always keep the agitator below the liquid surface; use gas traps in pipelines emptying into storages to keep gas from flowing back into buildings; and forbid smoking, open flames, or spark producing operations in the immediate vicinity of the storage area.

Rescuing a person from a pit is a no-win operation. Unfortunately, when someone collapses in a pit, gases are so high that it is literally suicide for anyone else to enter without a self-contained breathing apparatus.

Schedule set for popular World Dairy Expo

MADISON, Wisc. – "World Dairy Expo has in the past 19 years become a fall tradition for dairy farmers," according to Brad Rugg, World Dairy Expo's executive vice president. "In keeping with Expo's tradition of quality, we've planned a well-rounded program with something of interest for the entire dairy farm family."

World Dairy Expo, the world's largest international trade show for dairy farmers, will be held October 2 through 6 at the Dane county Exposition Center in Madison, Wis. Over 400 commercial exhibitors will feature the latest available dairy farm technology, products and services.

Educational speakers programs are scheduled four times daily Wednesday through Saturday in the Education Tent. The programming has been designed to provide valuable information to dairymen to help weather the current economic storm.

Dairy experts will speak on topics such as "Profitable Udder Health Decisions That Insure Your Future," "Management - It Does Make The Difference," "Farm Outlook for 1986," and "Combining Art, Science and Common Sense in a Breeding Program."

The presidents of the six national breed associations whose animals participate at World Dairy Expo will form a panel to discuss "Our Breed in 1995." Another item of interest in the Education Tent will be a display of finalists in field-cured hay and haylage divisions from the World's Second Forage Analysis Super Bowl.

In addition to the commercial exhibits and Education Tent features, World Dairy Expo will host five dairy cattle shows of national status and one regional show. Ayrshire, Brown Swiss, Guernsey, Holstein, Jersey and Milking Shorthorns, expected to number over 1600 head, will compete for laurels.

Youth from across the United States will travel to Expo to participate in National 4-H, Intercollegiate and FFA dairy cattle judging contests and junior showmanship contests.

An informative ladies program, The Craft Forum, will feature daily style shows, craft and food demonstrations and informative speakers. Farm and urban dwellers alike will enjoy the variety of hand-crafted items on sale and the opportunity to purchase dairy-related gift items from The Purple Cow Gift Shop.

Also scheduled for the 1985 World Dairy Expo are an antique tractor pull, recognition awards banquets and the chance to see the best dairy cattle in North America.

World Dairy Expo will again offer the finest cattle for sale to dairymen interested in improving the genetics of their herds. Featured will be the East Central/Select Sale '85 on Thursday afternoon at 3:00 p.m . the World Premiere Colored Breeds Sale (featuring Ayrshire, Brown Swiss, Guernsey, Jersey and Milking Shorthorn) on Thursday evening, the World Premiere Holstein Sale on Friday evening; and the Premiere "200" Sale on Saturday evening. Farm Safety Tips

The only reasonable action that can be taken is to provide ventilation into the storage and wait for rescue personnel with the proper equipment. Barn fans and silo blowers are sources of ventilation that may be used. However, do not lower fans into the pit because of possible methane gas buildup.

Uncovered storages at ground level should be fenced to keep people and animals off the crust-like surface that normally develops. The surface crust may harden in very dry or extended cold periods, but the hardening will be uneven.

As the crust softens with changing weather conditions, a person or animal can suddenly break through. Do not leave ladders leaning against above ground tank storages. A person who accidentally falls into the tank will be trapped because he or she will be unable to climb the smooth surface.

Warning signs should be placed near open storages and above ground tanks, and a rescue pole and rope should be appropriately located in the area. Remember to warn visitors and guests of the hazards of manure storages because you are legally responsible for their safety while on your property.

Bedell hits USDA's export bonus plan

WASHINGTON – U.S. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, chairman of the House Agriculture Subcommittee on Department Operations, Research, and Foreign Agriculture, has scheduled a hearing to review the U.S. Department of Agriculture's export payment-in-kind (PIK) program.

The hearing will be 9:30 a.m. on Oct. 1 in 1302 Longworth House Office Building.

"From all reports, USDA's export bonus program has been plagued by problems and missteps from the start," Bedell said. "Even the Department's own export PIK advisory committee has urged that the program be radically changed or scrapped. The subcommittee wants to find out what's wrong with the program and what must be done to assure it's success."

USDA's export bonus program, called Bonus Incentive Commodity Export Program (Bicep), was to use government-provided bonuses of grain as lures to sell U.S. farm products abroad. In the four months since the program was announced, it has not led to any additional sales of U.S. grain.

"The program was apparently set up wrong in the beginning, and no attempts have been made to correct the problems," Bedell said.

Included in the House Agriculture Committee's recently approved 1985 Farm Bill is a much broader export bonus program. The USDA program has been limited to wheat and is aimed at very few countries.

"U.S. farm exports have dropped sharply since their peak in 1981," Bedell said. "We need a strong, aggressive export program, but USDA's very limited program has fallen far short of the need."

Reagan explains views on Farm Bill controversy

WASHINGTON – Senator Jesse Helms has released the text of a letter he received from President Reagan, outlining the President's views on the 1985 farm bill.

"The President has outlined to members of the Senate Agriculture Committee the objectives he thinks must be met in the farm bill to return the hope of prosperity to American agriculture," said Helms. "I have discussed the farm bill with the President, and I can assure my friends in agriculture that the President insists that the 1985 farm bill must avoid the mistakes of the past and set agriculture on the path of long-term growth and prosperity."

"I think the clear message in this letter is that the President is keenly aware of the crisis in agriculture and stands ready to work with Congress to address the problems faced by farmers," said Helms.

Here is the text of the President's letter:

One of the most important issues facing the Congress this year is the writing of the 1985 Farm Bill. In this legislation, the Congress will have the opportunity to make the fundamental reforms necessary to assure long-term farm prosperity.

We are in a period of difficulty for America's farmers. Prices for the major crops are weak. Demand for exports has fallen as foreign suppliers fill markets once ours alone. Although the successful effort to control inflation has helped [illegible] an end to double-digit increases in the cost of fuel, fertilizer, and other supplies, at the same time it weakened many farmers financially by dampening inflation-fueled speculation that had been causing land prices to rise sharply.

Farming and ranching are hard work, maybe the hardest. And the strength of our farmers and ranchers has always been the strength of their hopes for the future, seeing a young son or daughter working the fields or tending the herd, hoping they will stay on the farm or ranch and be able to make a go of it.

Those hopes are threatened today. We hear that there is no future for our farmers and ranchers, only a faster or slower slide into failure.

Only by working together can we plant the seed of hope for America's agriculture community.

In writing the laws that will govern Federal farm programs in the coming years, I believe that we can find agreement on objectives to guide us:

- Establishment of commodity price supports that allow export-dependent commodities to become competitive in international markets;
- Gradual reductions in the level of income support each year;
- Reductions in the dairy support price as long as surpluses exist;
- A phase out of acreage reduction programs; and
- Targeting of income benefits to legitimate family farm operations.

In addition, we must develop agricultural policies that do not harm our overall fiscal policy. In this regard, the budget levels adopted by the House and Senate in the First Concurrent Resolution on the Budget should serve as the appropriate balance between the funding needs of farm programs and the need to reduce the deficit.

The farm problem is as important as any challenge we face. We must, therefore, approach it with a spirit of cooperation and consensus. A way of life is at risk, one too precious to our national heritage to be the subject of politically-inspired machinations.

I have asked Secretary John Block to renew the Administration's effort to arrive at a farm bill that will achieve the objectives outlined above. He will work with those in the Congress who share these objectives.

I look forward to signing a farm bill that provides hope, not measured doses of despair. But I must note that I am prepared to disapprove legislation that repeats the mistakes of the past.

We must work together to fulfill our responsibility to this nation's farmers.

State trade conference to be Oct. 6-7 in Hershey

HARRISBURG – "Surviving and Prospering in a More Competitive Global Economy" is the theme of the tenth annual Pennsylvania International Trade Conference set for the Hotel Hershey in Hershey on October 6-7, according to Acting State Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Grubb.

"The Conference is an ideal setting for producers of agricultural and food products and prospective exporters to meet and discuss international marketing ideas and strategies with industrial officials who have had success in the world marketplace," said Grubb.

According to Grubb, the Commonwealth has increased its exports of "value-added" products by 25 percent since 1982. Total agricultural exports exceeded $600 million in 1984. Key product areas where gains have been made include processed foods, forest products, livestock and hides.

The Thornburgh administration, through the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, has made development of agricultural export markets a priority. By providing technical assistance through USDA's Agricultural Information and Marketing Services (AIMS) programs and events like the PITC, the Department has aided processors and manufacturers of agricultural products to find new buyers for their goods and services.

Topics scheduled for opening day are "Asian Opportunities," and an agricultural workshop led by Evans Browne, U.S. Foreign Agricultural Service. Specifically, he will discuss the marketing opportunities associated with the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea. Browne opened the Korean Agricultural Trade Office in Seoul.

On Monday morning, Timothy Kearney, economist with Mellon Bank, and James C. Denny, vice president and manager of the Asian PNC Financial Corporation, will address the group on the "U.S. Trade Outlook for Asia and Latin America." Assistant U.S. Trade Representative Susan Early will discuss the "New U.S. Trade Policy." Other sessions include "Penetrating The Japanese Market," by international consultant Robert Miller and Hiroyuki Wakabayashi, executive director of JETRO; "Counter Trade Bartering" by Leo Welt, president of Welt International; and "Meeting World Competition" by C. Fred Fetterolf, president and chief operating officer of Alcoa Aluminum Company.

"The conference is also a time to recognize the efforts of those firms who have made inroads into the international market," said Grubb.

The 1985 Governor's Export Awards will be presented at a luncheon October 7 at 1 p.m. These awards reaffirm the Governor's committment to increasing Pennsylvania's export marketing and international trade. Awards will be presented in three categories to a small, medium and large firm which export agricultural services or manufactured products. The export awards program was established by Governor Thornburgh in 1980 to encourage Pennsylvania companies to seek export markets for their goods and services.

For additional information or registration, write to the Pennsylvania International Trade Conference, c/o International Trade Administration, 9448 Federal Building, 600 Arch Street, Philadelphia, PA 19106, or to Gretchen Vreeland, Export Division, Bureau of Agricultural Development, Room 210, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110-9408.

The $75 registration fee covers workshops, receptions and meals.

Circleville Farm to provide 'realistic view' of farming

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. – A master plan to use 162 acres of farmland for a hands-on farm for students has been presented to The Pennsylvania State University Board of Trustees.

Ralph E. Zilly, vice president for business, told the board that the Circleville farm, located at the westerly edge of the University Park campus, is being developed to provide a realistic view of small-scale agriculture. It will emphasize practical hands-on educational experience in farming practices, he said.

"The tract had been used for agricultural purposes and will remain primarily for that purpose," Mr. Zilly said. "It will be an experience for students in sustainable, diversified and profitable farming enterprises," he said.

The proposed general layout and development of the land includes a diversified mix of crops and livestock typical to many small farms in Pennsylvania and the Northeast, he said.

The land was purchased in 1972 from D. Otis Corl, who remains a neighbor to the farm.

The only existing structure at the farm on Circleville Road is a 99-year-old barn which has recently been repaired as part of a joint faculty and student effort. It will be used for the storage of hay, forage and some machinery, Mr. Zilly said.

The Board of Trustees also were told about a proposed pole barn to be built near the center of the tract. This new barn will temporarily serve as the base of operations for the farm.

Mr. Zilly said the pre-engineered wood frame structure, to be completed this fall, will be a 60- by 40-foot barn, with metal roofing and siding. The south sidewall will consist of a series of sliding doors, he added.

As additional funds become available, a farm center will be built, which will include classroom space, offices and work rooms, and will serve as the permanent headquarters.

Plans call for separate holding facilities for small and large livestock, a nursery and an orchard to be developed as well, he said.

The existing farm road system will be expanded and electric, telephone, water and sanitary services will be provided, he said.

Referendum Passes

The referendum on the national advertising and promotion program, financed by 15-cent milk check deductions, was approved overwhelmingly by 89.7 percent of those producers who voted. There was a total of 120,330 dairymen who participated in the referendum, which ended August 20, and 107,926 voted to extend the program indefinitely.

Approval was expected but the high percentage was a surprise to some. More surprisingly was the 60 percent of farmers participating, but some will also interpret that as passive approval by those who were eligible to vote but didn't.

This referendum was required by the Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act of 1983, but the next one won't be held until requested by the Secretary of Agriculture or a representative group of producers, comprising at least ten percent of the national total. No one expects either of these to happen in the near future.

So, the first national promotion program financed by mandatory contributions from producers has passed its first test. Most of these national funds of nearly $200 million dollars get filtered down to local promotion programs conducted by state or marketing area organizations, all of which will continue to receive funds as a result of the referendum.

Because much of the promotion efforts of the program have been functioning effectively for less than a year, approval was almost necessary to provide enough time to realize its possibilities and to evaluate the effect on producer income. Some of the efforts, such as new product development and research, take a lot of time and money, but now these programs can be expanded with the hope of future funding.

Even the advertising and promotion efforts, while the most visible to producers and where the most money went so far, take time to "catch on" and even more time to evaluate. To the credit of the national board, a substantial share of their funds will be used for evaluation to determine what efforts produce the best returns.

There are so many different products within the dairy industry and so many ways to promote them that no one in the past has had the resources to undertake such a job. This will be a "first" for the dairy industry and may provide the most lasting benefits, even if producers, in the next referendum, decide to discontinue their support.

Finally, one of the bright spots in the current trend toward record-high milk production is that the industry will at least provide more money for advertising and promotion.

Record High

That record high milk production of the last two months was continued in July with a jump nationally of eight percent. Pennsylvania and Order 2 producers helped it along with seven percent increases. Order 2 continued the trend with a record high August pool and a jump of over nine percent in average producer shipments.

The uniform price to Order 2 producers for August milk was $12.27 for 3.5 milk at the 201-210 mile zone. That was 34 cents more than July but all of that came out of a Louisville Plan pay back that will continue monthly now until November.

Class prices were down from last month; twenty-six on Class I and three cents on Class II, but a 1.6 percent increase in Class I utilization took care of the price drops.

Those falling Class prices are reflecting drops in the Minnesota-Wisconsin Price Series which total $1.32 since January. Normally, the M-W would have started back up in July after a low in May and June, but this year it just continued down. It may not stop going down if Congress doesn't vote to continue the present support price of $11.60 when it ends on September 30.

If we keep the $11.60 support price, we will certainly see the record production levels of the last few months continuing into the winter and with them, falling prices. The support price is not reliable anymore as a market price floor, as we've seen this year. It's a target price, and lately has missed the target. Even the M-W price, which should be higher than the support price, was 22 cents less in August.

Even if Congress votes a cut in the support price to $11.10 on October 1, I don't believe it will change milk production by the end of the year. It will only mean prices even lower than at an $11.60 support.

How Come?

We've plowed this field before, comparing milk prices to feed prices to account for the record high milk production that keeps flowing from farms in spite of falling prices. The only difference now in September, compared to earlier this year when the production increases started, is that things are getting better if you want to produce more milk.

The uniform price in Order 2 was down $1.12 from last year in August. If you deduct your 50-cent assessment from last year's price the difference is on 62 cents or about five percent less. The cost of a 16 percent dairy ration has dropped 15 percent on the average here in the Northeast. With the present crop prospects for feed grains, there seems to be nothing but lower prices into the future.

The price support program for feed grains this year will require a real bail out of grain farmers by CCC, but dairy farmers will get some of the benfits. Just don't look for a giveaway on feed grains as you have with butter and cheese! Wouldn't that be something? In any case, you can expect more falling prices that will widen the gap between milk prices and feed prices even further.

But considering the present drop of 15 percent in feed prices against a five percent drop in milk prices even if the support price was cut 50 cents, that would be another four percent drop in milk prices or a total of nine percent. If grain prices keep dropping, you may see feed prices down to 18 or 20 percent under last year.

That's why I'm speculating that if we rely on milk price alone to adjust the supply to demand, even a support price of $11.10 may not do the job, unless we add something else to the program to make production cuts more appealing to farmers. Certainly, there are other costs in addition to feed for producing milk but, in the short run, feed is the most important.

Perhaps we should view 'this period of lower feed prices as a break that can't last but that does give us a breather while we figure out what we want in the way of a dairy program for the long haul But we better hurry up. Time running out.

Fall cheese promotion underway

SYRACUSE, N.Y – Cheese is one of the fastest growing segments of the dairy industry. In order to capitalize on consumer's growing taste for cheese, dairy farmers nationwide are sponsoring a $7.5 million cheese promotion this fall.

The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council (ADADC) will promote the event locally, including an emphasis on New York State Cheese.

The national program includes media advertising, supermarket displays and restaurant promotions. All segments of the program use the theme "Make Your Meals Sing With Real Cheese." Featured cheeses are American, Cheddar, Colby, Blue, Swiss, Mozzarella, Muenster, Monterey Jack and Gouda.

The promotion is a coordinated effort between the National Dairy Board (NDB) and regional milk promotion organizations such as ADADC. The NDB will sponsor national media advertising; locally, ADADC will install cheese display materials in over 2300 supermarkets throughout New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

A special feature for consumers will be an offer to purchase a 1986 engagement book for cooks. The book includes weekly planning calendars, recipes, cheese facts and cooking tips. This $7.95 value will be offered for $3.95 plus two proofs of purchase from a real domestic cheese package.

ADADC will tie New York State cheese into the national promotion. Special radio ads for New York cheese have been produced. In addition, supermarket managers will be invited to participate in a New York State cheese display contest. Prizes will be awarded for the most creative displays.

The fall cheese promotion is part of the total dairy promotion program of ADADC. ADADC is a dairy promotion organization funded and directed by dairymen in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Order 4 milk $12.54 for August

ALEXANDRIA, Va. – Middle Atlantic Order Market Administrator Joseph D. Shine has announced an August base milk price of $12.54 per hundredweight and an excess milk price of $11.10. The weighted average August price was $12.46 and the butterfat differential for the month was 16.2 cents.

The base milk price was down 5 cents from July and was $1.14 below last August. The weighted average price was also down 5 cents from July and was $1.26 below last August.

Shine said that the August volume of producer milk pooled under the order, 529.0 million pounds, was 68 million pounds or nearly 15 percent more than last August. The average daily delivery per producer of 2,547 pounds in August was up 370 pounds or 17 percent from a year earlier. A total of 6,699 producers supplied Order 4 pool handlers during the month, 131 fewer than last August.

Class I producer milk totaled 236.5 million pounds and accounted for 44.71 percent of total producer milk receipts in August. The August 1984 Class I utilization was 51.98 percent. The volume of Class I producer milk was down slightly from a year ago.

The volume of Class II milk was up 71.1 million pounds or 32 percent from a year earlier. Base milk accounted for 88.2 percent of total August producer milk deliveries, down significantly from 95.12 percent last August. The average butterfat test of producer milk of 3.48 percent in August was practically unchanged from a year ago.

Order 4 pool handlers reported Class I in-area milk sales of 203.3 million pounds during August, an increase of almost 2 percent from a year earlier, after adjustment to eliminiate variation due to calendar composition.

ADADC holds central Pennsylvania meeting

WILLIAMSPORT, PA – District 19 of the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council (ADADC) held its annual meeting recently in Mifflinburg. ADADC's Williamsport staff members presented the accomplishments of the office during its first full year of operation.

Dairymen attending the meeting were able to view several of the successful milk promotion programs which have been implemented in Pennsylvania since the opening of the Williamsport office, particularly in the areas of supermarket promotion and nutrition education. These programs supplement the current media advertising being bought by ADADC and the National Dairy Board (NDB) for milk, cheese, and butter.

Four promotion programs will be placed in Pennsylvania supermarkets during 1985. Roberta Bronson, dairy marketing specialist for ADADC explained the new sales promotion kit which will appear in dairy cases this fall focusing on cheese.

Bronson explained how ADADC is co-operating with the National Dairy Board on this program. NDB will purchase national television ads for cheese this fall while ADADC will place the corresponding cheese display materials in supermarket dairy cases throughout the area.

Diane Anderson, Dairy Council nutrition consultant explained the progress which has been made in the nutrition education program in the area.

Since beginning her work in the Williamsport area late in 1984, she has been able to place over 500 Dairy Council education curriculum kits in area schools. School educators from the District 19 area were also present at the meeting to view the Dairy Council materials.

Industry relation manager Charlie Kier discussed the new billbords which are being made available to county promotion groups. The 6x10-foot billboards display the "Milk's Got More" logo. Approximately 20 have been installed in the area so far.

Sun Area Dairy Princess Denise Thomas also was on hand to speak to the group.

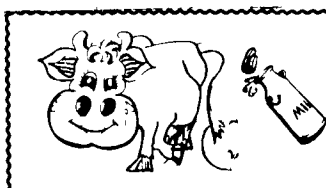
Elections were held following the staff presentation. Dave Dietrich was elected to the committee and Leon Musser was re-elected as committeeman. They will serve three-year terms. Fred Epler will continue to serve as district director.

The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council is a producer funded and directed milk promotion agency serving dairy producers in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York.

Inter-State meeting changed

SOUTHAMPTON – Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative has announced a change in the date of one of the organization's local meetings.

The Philipsburg Local meeting, originally scheduled for Sept. 19, will be held Sept. 26. The meeting time and place, at 6:45 p.m. at the Harbor Inn, Philipsburg, will remain the same.



Marketing highlighted at Maryland and Virginia meeting

BY BETSY STITT
Staff Correspondent

CENTERVILLE — Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative Association, Inc. held a district meeting recently at the Centerville United Methodist Church, Bedford County. The annual meeting brought the area dairy co-op members up to date on the latest developments in the market and on activities of the Association.

Dairy Marketing

James E. Click, main speaker for the evening and secretary-treasurer and general manager of Maryland and Virginia, acknowledged that milk production is up — by 25 percent over last August — but sales aren't matching the increase. He said that, although he didn't want to be pessimistic, the picture is not as bright as it has been.

Sales, of course, are slowly increasing thanks to the dairy promotion program.

Reporting on the farm unity bill, Click noted that Maryland and Virginia is in favor of the unified effort. He said that to get the bill passed in Congress it will take just what the bill says — unity of all farmers.

Click pointed out that the bill must make its way through Congress before October 1.

Another bill which includes whole-herd reductions, which was introduced by Congressman Jeffords of Vermont, has also received attention, he added.

Click predicted that prices between now and July 1986, will stay about the same, between $12.30 and $12.70. Maryland and Virginia will still be able to honor its thirteenth milk check this year. The cooperative's quality premium is being raised from 7 cents to 10 cents per hundredweight.

Reporting on the operations of the cooperative, Click noted that many of the dairy plants are going through personnel changes. The Marva Maid plant is branching out, getting into a little more fluid milk. A new cooler installed at the plant can handle a double capacity of milk.

In questions following the general manager's presentation, several farmers raised questions about using a base-excess plan to control production. Click noted that a base-excess plan could be a solution if all farmers across the nation would unite and push for it, but dairy farmers in the west have not been real warm to this solution.

After several minutes of discussion, a vote was taken and all producers at the meeting favored the base-excess plan.

Click said he would report their vote back to the co-op leadership. He said regardless of the situation, Maryland and Virginia would do its best to represent the producer on the market.

Several guests were also present at the meeting, including Bedford County dairy princess Shawnee Yothers; Todd McVey, Allegheny County extension agent; Glenn Soyer, of Maryland and Virginia; young cooperator Doug McCaulley; and Paul Hornbaker, director from Cumberland County.

Order 2 dairy farmers to receive $12.27 for August

Dairy Marketing

NEW YORK — Dairy farmers who supplied milk plants regulated under the New York-New Jersey marketing orders during August will be paid on the basis of a uniform price of $12.27 per hundredweight (26.4 cents per quart).

Market Administrator Thomas A. Wilson also stated that the price was $11.93 in July 1985 and $13.39 in August 1984. The uniform price is a marketwide weighted average of the value of farm milk used for fluid and manufactured dairy products.

The seasonal incentive fund returned a total of $3,369,177 74, or $.346 per hundredweight, to the dairy farmers' uniform price for August. This fund was generated by reducing the uniform price paid to producers during the high-production spring months.

The following handler failed to pay his pool obligation for July 1985: Bernard, Alan & Kenneth Gouz.

A total of 16,521 dairy farmers supplied the New York-New Jersey Milk Marketing Area with 972,808,435 pounds of milk during August, an increase of 7.0 percent (about 64 million pounds) from last year The gross value to dairy farmers was $120,231,138.25. This included differentials required to be paid to dairy farmers but not voluntary premiums or deductions authorized by the farmer.

Regulated milk dealers (handlers) used 377,870,761 pounds of milk for Class I, 38.8 percent of the total. This milk is used for fluid milk products such as homogenized, flavored, low test, and skim milks. For August, handlers paid $13.45 per hundredweight (28.9 cents per quart) for Class I milk compared with $14.34 a year ago.

The balance (594,937,674 pounds or 61.2 percent) was used to manufacture Class II products including butter, cheese, ice cream, and yogurt. Handlers paid $11.18 per hundredweight for this milk.

The uniform price is based on milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat. For August there was a price differential of 16.2 cents for each one-tenth of one percent that the milk tested above or below the 3.5 percent standard.

All prices quoted are for bulk tank milk received within the 201-210 mile zone from New York City.

Yemen picked for bonus wheat sale

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block has announced that a wheat offer to the Yemen Arab Republic will be the fifth initiative under the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Export Enhancement Program. As with previous announcements under this program, sales will be made at competitive world prices.

Block said this program will give U.S. exporters the opportunity to sell up to 100,000 metric tons of wheat, including a Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) bonus in the form of wheat to be provided a U.S. exporters from CCC stocks. The CCC bonus will enable U.S. exporters to compete at commercial prices in the Yemen Arab Republic market in response to future tenders for wheat.

Previously announced credit guarantees for the Yemen Arab Republic under the Export Credit Guarantee Program (GSM-102) are available for use in conjunction with this export enhancement initiative. A wheat flour initiative for Yemen under the Export Enhancement Program was announced on August 20.

The announcement and invitation for offers from exporters will be issued by the CCC's Kansas City Commodity Office in Kansas City, Mo.

Farmer's Lung caused by mold spores

UNIVERSITY PARK – Many people associate farming with fresh air and a healthy, robust environment in which to work and live. However, much of the air that farmers breathe is dirty and sometimes lethal. Farmer's Lung and Pulmonary Mycotoxicosis are names given to two farm occupational diseases caused by inhaling airborne mold spores.

Silo Unloaders Syndrome is another name for Pulmonary Mycotoxicosis because the condition often occurs during the unloading or uncapping of silos. Similar diseases associated with other agricultural occupations have been termed Bird Fanciers' Lung, Mushroom Workers' Lung, Wood Pulp Workers' Disease, etc.

Mold spores are produced by microorganisms which grow in baled hay, stored grain, or silage with a high moisture content (30 percent). They become active when temperatures reach 70 degrees fahrenheit in poorly ventilated areas. Farmers most often suffer from these diseases in winter and early spring because the molds have had time to develop in closed storage areas.

Heavy concentrations of mold spores appear as a dry, white or grey powder in grain or forage. When the feed is moved, billions of these microscopic-sized particles become airborne and attach themselves to dust. These particles pass through the body's natural filtering mechanisms (nose, hair, and throat mucous) and accumulate in the lungs where they can cause an allergic type of pneumonia. Repeated attacks can lead to scarring of lung tissue which impairs its function. Such tissue damage is permanent.

Pulmonary Mycotoxicosis and Farmer's Lung are closely related diseases, but there are some differences. They are similar in routes of entry and in the symptoms they cause. Farmer's Lung symptoms usually reoccur, and a person can become sensitized to the mold. This means it usually takes less exposure for a severe reaction with each succeeding incident.

The symptom's of Farmer's Lung and Pulmonary Mycotoxicosis are often striking, yet the diseases go unrecognized by many victims and misdiagnosed by physicians not familiar with farm health hazards. Victims and doctors alike often confuse Farmer's Lung and Pulmonary Mycotoxicosis with asthma attacks, pneumonia, or flu because the symptoms are similar.

Exposure to mold spores may produce the following symptoms: First, there is a delayed reaction of 3 to 8 hours during which the patient may develop shortness of breath; tightness in the chest; fatigue; a dry, unproductive cough; muscle ache, headache, chills and fever. The most serious stage of the reaction may last approximately 12 to 48 hours, but some effects are likely to linger for up to two weeks.

Acute exposure symptoms eventually disappear with no apparent lasting effect, particularly with first time or mild exposures. While Pulmonary Mycotoxicosis is not thought to cause permanent lung damage, repeated episodes of Farmers' Lung may. Since knowing which disease will attack is impossible to predict, both diseases must be considered very serious hazards. Occasional mild symptoms of both diseases are most often dismissed as bouts of flu or other illness. The result is that the diseases are often not properly diagnosed until the symptoms have become severe and constant.

There are several management practices that can either help prevent the growth of mold spores or limit the damage they can cause. Using mold inhibitors, baling hay, ensiling crops, and harvesting and storing grains at the recommended moisture content limits mold spore growth. It also maximizes the quality of your feedstuffs. Converting to mechanical or automated feeding or feed handling systems can reduce the amount of airborne mold spores or can reduce human exposure. Wetting down materials before use may help keep spore distribution to a minimum.

Respiratory protection is the last line of defense against Farmer's Lung and Pulmonary Mycotoxicosis. The proper type respirator can protect those who have not contacted the diseases or help prevent the diseases from getting worse. Particulate respirators are available at your local pharmacy or from your agricultural chemical supplier.

These are approved for protection against dust, such as asbestos, and they provide inexpensive protection against mold spores. More expensive and sophisticated respiratory devices may be required occasionally. Commonly available disposable respirators for nuisance dusts are not effective against the tiny mold spores.

Farmer's Lung and Pulmonary Mycotoxicosis are two of the most serious health hazards found on most farms. Yet, through good management practices and respiratory protection, you can completely avoid these diseases. Don't wait until you are permanently impaired before you take action.

Titusville dairyman helps troubled youth learn responsibility on his farm

BY MARTHA GEHRINGER
Staff Correspondent

TITUSVILLE — For the past 30 years Gordon Turk has been helping troubled kids gain a sense of self-respect and responsibility by working with them on his dairy farm near Titusville.

Turk never planned to take in these youngsters; it just started happening. People — friends of friends, friends from church, parents with "difficult" children — sought him out.

The beginning can be traced to Jimmy, a friend of Turk's younger brother. Jimmy's parents were both alcoholics and he needed a place to stay, so he lived with Turk for about two years before leaving to join the navy.

Following Jimmy came Bill, John, Jeff, David, Laine and many more. Gordon has no idea exactly how many he has helped, since his notes on "his kids" were destroyed in a fire that claimed his house.

He does have four albums filled with photos of his kids. And along with the photos he has memories of each one and the knowledge he gained from working with them.

The kids come from various backgrounds and at an average age of 14. At this age, Turk notes, they have developed a unique personality and have some sort of direction. They are invariably from families with good mothers, he said, but are either fatherless or have a poor relationship with their father. Essentially, Turk fills this male role in their lives.

When these troubled teens come to Turk, he takes them in and gives them a job. They can live with him, or they can live with their families in the area.

Regardless, Turk sets a few rules that they are expected to follow — no drinking or smoking, no hard rock music, no yelling or fighting.

He says expects them to act like real people and to confront their problems. They can't play games and pretend the problems don't exist, Turk said. They must be honest and open about them.

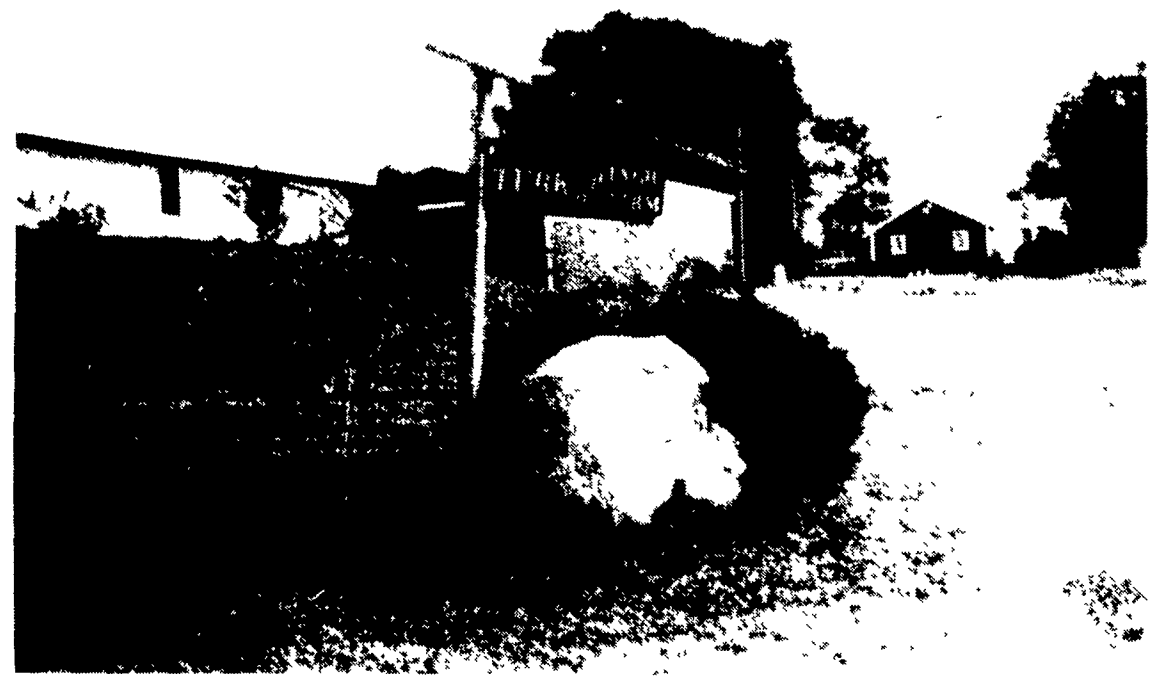
If they live with Turk, they are responsible for keeping their room neat and clean and helping with certain household chores.

Working on the farm is limited only to what the individual wants to accomplish, Turk said. If they want to learn something, or if Turk asks them to do something, he is more than willing to teach them.

At the same time, he takes no arguments and expects the teens to do their jobs correctly. After all, he is the boss.

When they start their jobs on the farm, most don't know how to work, Turk notes. But it is through their work that they eventually gain a sense of accomplishment and self-worth, Turk says.

Will Galinsky, one of Turk's graduates, has found that the things he learned on the farm can be applied to many areas.



The farm many kids call home is located just outside of Titusville and covers about 300 acres.

Gordon Turk has helped many troubled youths on his farm near Titusville.

Turk pays the teens for their work and believes that earning an honest wage is a contributing factor in their sense of accomplishment and self-respect.

There have been times when Turk has had three to five kids working for him on the farm at one time. When there are this many together, he says, the group becomes like a family, something most of the kids have never really had.

Turk says he tries to provide all the aspects of a family -- security, caring, trust, fairness, and most importantly, love. And, in this family unit communication skills are vital to success.

To help the teens, Turk says, he needs to know what they are feeling, and he tries to treat them with respect and sensitivity. Basically, "it is all part of teaching by living all the aspects of a good moral live," he says.

Once the youth have grasped these basics and have a sense of self worth, they can go out into the real world prepared to create a life for themselves, he said.

However, all the kids are not success stories. Several boys were just not willing to learn or had problems that could not be overcome on the farm, Turk said.

Some of these boys came to Turk through organized programs even though he has never actively participated in these organizations. He says he differs with their basic philosophies. Yet when they have asked for his help, he hasn't turned them down.

While some organizations pay such volunteers, Turk has never taken payment for his role.

The parents of these teens are sometimes difficult to deal with, Turk said. He tries to establish a trusting relationship with the kids in addition to providing them with a "family." But some parents, he said, see this relationship as a threat and are, in a sense, jealous of what their kids have found or developed.

This happens even though the parents origionally encourage or put their child with Turk. Although an open line of communication is maintained with the parents and they are consulted when problems develop, hard feelings may still develop, he said.

As with any family, feelings get hurt and problems develop. After each kid leaves or "graduates" to go on with their life, Turk says he vows, "no more." But then someone comes by and Gordon relents, because each one leaves behind memories.

Turk says he has no regrets about taking in these kids or anything that has happened concerning them. The only exception, he says, would be the first one, who he spoiled by giving all the things he never had. It didn't work, Turk says, and he is the only one who doesn't keep in touch.

Through this youth, Turk said, he learned to be a little tougher. Instead, he says, "you love them, just because they are there. And if you expect something from them, they respond."

Turk has enjoyed a unique relationship with his most recent graduate, Laine. He believes he was the toughest on Laine and expected the most from him, and in turn, he responded very well. Laine was always ambitious, and Turk believes he was able to help him find a direction for his goals. Laine is currently a freshman in college majoring in dairy husbandry.

The "family" atmosphere continues even after the kids graduate as they return "home" to visit or seek Turk's advice.

Although he hasn't had one hundred percent success, Turk says he wouldn't trade his experiences for a million dollars. And while he doesn't plan to take in any more young men, he doubts that he will turn anyone away either.

Helping the troubled teens has been a very rewarding experience for Turk. When the kids leave, they have the benefit of the farm experience, a family relationship and the knowledge they always have a home in Titusville.

The Long Green Line™

Nothing runs like a Deere™

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Sad, isn't it, when a bumper harvest wreaks rural despair, rather than joy.

But across the country, the bin-busting promised yields of corn and beans already have commodity prices at the bottom of the charts. And we ponder that the farmer can feed the world, but not earn enough to make the interest payment.

Here, closer to immediate concern, we have our own unique version of a "bumper harvest" problem.

"C'mere, I want you to see something," mysteriously said the farmer one evening last week, crooking his finger toward the dairy barn.

"Nooooo," I muttered. "Don't tell me. Twins."

"Which one do you want...the bull or the heifer?"

"I don't want either! I don't want twins! I want you to tell me you're kidding!"

Thus marked the third set of twins delivered by dairy cows in the herd this summer.

If such double returns sound profitable, bear in mind this fact: twins are–almost without exception–a problem. If the set is of one bull and one heifer, ninety percent of the time the heifer will lack a reproductive system, and be known as a "freemartin." A freemartin might as well have been a bull to begin with.

Even with a pair of bulls, or pair of heifers, you're not home free Generally, a cow with twins delivers early, has reproductive tract problems due to retained placentas, or may twist a stomach with all that empty space in her system. And maybe not properly breed back when she should.

Twin dairy calves–with rare exceptions–are just bad news.

Our first set of the year was a lovely set of matched heifers from Apache Apache's not the brightest cow in the barn. She flies, or leaps, into her stall and once caught the farmer's finger against the pipe as she landed, resulting in stitches (for him, not her).

But her little girls–Apple and Apricot--are fat, sassy, and growing along well in the weaned-calves group. Apache is he usual tempermental self.

Sue, our highest herd producer with records over 30,000 pounds of milk, dropped twins one day in August while we were away. A bull and a heifer, naturally. Both died. Sue has had health problems ever since.

It was Bessie who calved the night I was beckoned toward the barn. Bessie's about ten, and that age says her days in the herd are certainly numbered. Not many more years to give us nice heifers. This pair came, legs and heads all tangled together, tails first. The bull seemed strong and healthy, and Momma busily licked him off. But the little girl that arrived second was weak; Momma wouldn't even tend to her.

By morning, though, with bottles of colostrum in her tiny tummy, Baby girl was toughened enough to come hunting a second breakfast as I fed her disinterested brother. Doc says she might–just might–be one of those rare twin breeders Cross your fingers

"I see we have a calf in the freshening lot," was my first comment as we hauled home the last show equipment from the York Fair.

"Wrong," he said. "Would you believe twins?"

Our first belief that Jean's calves were both bulls was also wrong. Guess what they are? And this heifer shows no signs of being a potential herd replacement.

Twins are definitely not what we consider a bumper crop.

More like a bummer crop.

Md. youth to compete

COLLEGE PARK, Md. – Mark S Yohn, 17 of Reisterstown will represent Maryland during the annual Eastern region division of the U.S. 4-H Engineering Event at Richmond, Va. this week.

Mark earned the opportunity for interstate competition by winning the 4-H tractor operators contest on Aug. 30 at the Maryland State Fair in Timonium.

Competing at Richmond is not new for Mark. Two years ago, he won the state fair 4-H compact tractor contest and the right to represent Maryland in that event – placing sixth among 13 state contestants.

The Richmond event is held each year in conjunction with the Atlantic Rural Exposition and State Fair of Virginia.

Representing Maryland in 4-H automotive care and safety competition at Richmond next week will be Brian Williams, 18, of Perryville and David A. Hill, 16, of Kennedyville. Brian and David placed first and second, respectively, in similar competition last month at the Maryland State Fair.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Last night I was weeding my four long strawberry rows when I realized that the shots in the distance really were not that distant. So, I stopped my work to check if I could see the hunters in the meadow. There was no one in sight as a corn field hid part of the pasture land.

I was only a few steps from my cantaloupe and melon patch, so I decided to pick the two ripest cantaloupes. Just as I stooped to pick them another shot rang out and tiny pellets rained all around me. This really got my dander up and I hollered at the unseen hunters. I figured that they were hunting morningg doves, but I didn't know if they could hear me yell at them or if I could expect another shower of shot. So, I dashed to the house and got the car keys to see if I could find them.

Our 100 some acres are a sprawling acreage. The farm is interlaced with roads and driveways to the nineteen cottages that lay along the Conestoga River. Therefore, the quickest way to a distant cabin is by car.

There I found a fancy red car parked on a neatly manicured lawn. I was told by the cottager that she didn't know whose car it was and they had not asked her permission to park there. Therefore, I started walking through an alfalfa field toward the two culprits. They turned out to be neighbors, but despite that I told them to get out and not come back this season. They should know better than to shoot toward our house.

Over the years we've had many, many experiences with hunters. Most of them do not ask permission to hunt on our property. Now the man who shot 20 groundhogs on our farm this summer is welcome. You see, our machinery is often broken by their holes in the middle of the fields.

Celebrate fall with low-cal chicken

When nutritionists advise including a complete protein in the daily diet but cutting down on calories, they could be saying, "Serve chicken often."

Chicken scores high on each of these nutritional points. And it fits right in with today's trend toward healthier eating habits.

Long regarded as a budget-buy, chicken is now widely accepted as the choice meat for calorie counters.

LEMON CHICKEN

4 whole chicken breasts
½ cup cornstarch
½ teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
¼ cup water
4 egg yolks, slightly beaten
4 green onions, sliced
Oil for deep frying (3 cups)

Skin and debone the breasts and cut them in half. Pound slightly with a rolling pin. Combine cornstarch, salt and pepper in small bowl. Gradually blend in water and egg yolks.

Heat oil to 375°F. Dip breasts one at a time into cornstarch, egg yolk mixture. Fry breast until golden. About 5 minutes. Cut each breast into 3 or 4 pieces and arrange on a serving platter. Sprinkle with onions. Cover with Lemon Sauce.

Lemon Sauce

1½ cups water
½ cup lemon juice
3½ tablespoons packed light brown sugar
3 tablespoons cornstarch
3 tablespoons honey
2 teaspoons instant chicken bouillon
1 teaspoon grated fresh ginger root

Combine all ingredients. Stir until blended. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until sauce boils and thickens - about 5 minutes. Pour over chicken.

Serves 4 to 6.

CREAMY BAKED CHICKEN

Split 4 breasts or thighs of chicken. Lay flat in a 9 x 13-inch pan. Place slice of Velveeta cheese on top of each piece of chicken.

Stir together 1 can cream of chicken soup and ¼ cup milk. Pour over meat and cheese. Sprinkle with one box stuffing mix on top. (Do not prepare stuffing as box tells you; just mix crumbs and seasoning together.) Drizzle ⅓ cup melted oleo on top of stuffing mix. Bake uncovered at 350°F. for 1 hour or until chicken is tender.

Add flour and milk to melted butter. Add 2 cups cut-up chicken, ½ cup celery and parsley, salt, pepper to the white sauce.

Chill and shape into ball; dip into beaten eggs, roll in cracker crumbs then deep fry until brown.

BAR-B-QUED CHICKEN

1 chicken, cut in parts
1 large onion, sliced
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ cup tomato catsup
½ cup molasses
¼ cup vinegar
2 tablespoons mustard

Place onion in shallow pan. Put chicken on top, single layer, with skin side up. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Mix other ingredients and pour over chicken. Bake uncovered at 350°F. for about 1 hour.

Chicken 'n Dumplings has become a classic recipe, served in this country since the earliest days of the nation and even before in Europe.

CHICKEN LIVER ONION DIP

¼ cup water
2 tablespoons dry onion soup mix
½ pound chicken livers
1 hard boiled egg, chopped
¼ cup mayonnaise
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
3 slices bacon, crisply cooked, drained and crumbled

Combine water and onion soup mix and set aside. In small saucepan, simmer chicken livers in water to cover for 8 to 10 minutes or until tender. Drain and cool. Chop livers very fine or put through a food grinder. Stir in remaining ingredients. Serve with assorted crackers or bite-size slices of bread.

CHICKEN SQUARES

Blend 3 ounces cream cheese and 2 tablespoons melted oleo together until smooth. Add:

2 cups cubed cooked chicken
Dash of salt
Dash of pepper
2 tablespoons milk
1 tablespoon minced dry onion.

Mix all ingredients well. Separate 8-ounce can crescent rolls into 4 rectangles, sealing the diagonal perforations. Spoon ½ cup chicken mixture onto center on each rectangle; pull 4 corners of dough to center, seal.

Brush top with 1 tablespoon melted oleo, then sprinkle with some crushed seasoned croutons. Bake on an ungreased cookie sheet for 20 to 25 minutes at 350°F. or until golden.

Note: It's best to place the crescent rolls on the cookie sheet to begin since they are hard to move once they are filled. I usually double the recipe and they can be eaten cold in lunches – they taste like a chicken salad sandwich. They can also be served with canned chicken cream soup for a gravy.

2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 can chicken and star soup
1 cup fresh chicken, cut in pices
1 soup can of water
¼ cup chopped, cooked spinach
Dash of nutmeg

In saucepan cook bacon, until crisp. Remove and crumble. Pour off all but 1 tablespoon drippings. Cook onion in drippings until tender. Add remaining ingredients. Heat, stirring occasionally Garnish with bacon.

Featured Recipe

If you're overrun with tomatoes like most gardners, you'll welcome this week's featured recipe from Miriam Over of Williamsburg, Pa.

This Tomato Suey recipe, which uses 1 peck of tomatoes per batch, will taste great on anything you generally serve catsup on.

Tomato Suey

1 peck tomatoes, skinned and cut up	8 onions, chopped fine
	½ cup salt

Drain well in colander overnight. The next day:

Tomatoes	1 pint vinegar
1 teaspoon cloves	1 teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon dry mustard	½ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon cinnamon	2 pounds sugar

Cook all ingredients, except sugar, slowly for 2 hours, stirring occasionally. Add sugar last and cook about 10 minutes longer. Put mixture into pint jars and hot pack for 10 to 15 minutes.

PRICE ROLLBACK!

RACINE, WISCONSIN 8/10/85... J I Case has rolled back prices on most Case International 94 Series two-wheel-drive agricultural tractors. The rollback results from ongoing cost reduction efforts in Case manufacturing operations.

The price reductions, now in effect, apply to new identity Case International tractors only. The rollback varies by model up to 8.7%, and applies to tractors marketed in the United States.

Case announced similar price rollbacks for Case International four-wheel-drive agricultural tractors and Case construction equipment in March.

J I Case said the price move is a positive response to current economic difficulties in the agricultural marketplace. "The rollback allows us to pass on to local customers the benefits of successful efforts to lower costs while improving quality at Case plants. We are committed to delivering the best possible value to our customers."

Low-cal chicken

CLASSIC CHICKEN 'N DUMPLINGS

1 broiler-fryer chicken, cut in parts
3 tablespoons plus 1 teaspoon butter, divided
1½ teaspoons salt, divided
½ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
⅔ cup chopped celery
⅔ cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 tablespoon fresh chopped parsley
3 cups water
1½ cups plus 3 tablespoons flour, divided
2 teaspoons baking powder
1¾ cups milk, divided

In large Dutch oven or heavy saucepan, place 2 tablespoons of the butter and melt over medium temperature. Add chicken and cook, turning, until brown on all sides, about 15 minutes. Sprinkle chicken with 1 teaspoon of the salt and pepper. Sprinkle celery and onion over top of chicken and add lemon juice, parsley and water.

Bring to a boil; cover, reduce temperature to low and simmer for about 45 minutes.

Sift together three times 1½ cups of the flour, baking powder and remaining ½ teaspoon of the salt. With pastry blender, blend in 4 teaspoons of the butter. Add ¾ cup of the milk and stir only until mixed. With tablespoon, drop dough on top of simmering chicken, allowing dough to rest on chicken. Cover and cook 20 minutes (do NOT uncover while cooking) or until wooden pick comes out clean when inserted in dumplings. Remove chicken parts with dumplings on top to large serving bowl or tureen, leaving broth in pan. To remaining 3 tablespoons of the flour, slowly add the remaining 1 cup of the milk, stirring to make a smooth paste. Add milk-flour mixture slowly to broth in pan, stirring to avoid lumps. Continue to stir and cook until gravy boils and thickens, about 2 minutes. Pour gravy over chicken and dumplings and serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

CHICKEN ETTIE

1 8-ounce package spaghetti, cooked and drained
3 to 4 cups cooked, cut up chicken
¼ cup green pepper
1 cup chicken broth
¼ teaspoon celery salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¾ pound Velveeta cheese, grated
2 cans cream of mushroom or chicken soup.

Mix all ingredients together keeping one cup grated cheese for the top. Bake at 350°F. for 1 hour.

STIR FRIED SWEET AND SOUR CHICKEN

1 whole broiler-fryer chicken breast, halved, boned, skinned and cut in bite-size pieces; and 4 broiler-fryer chicken thighs, boned, skinned and cut in bite-size pieces
2 tablespoons cooking oil
1½ cups sliced green pepper
⅔ cup diagonally sliced celery
½ cup sliced green onions, stems included
1 8½-ounce can water chestnuts, sliced
1 6-ounce package frozen Chinese or snow pea pods
1 8¾-ounce can pineapple chunks in heavy syrup
½ cup chicken broth
¼ cup sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ teaspoon powdered ginger
2 tablespoons vinegar
2 tablespoons soy sauce

In wok, electric skillet or fry pan on stove top, heat oil on high setting. Add chicken and stir fry for 5 minutes. Add green pepper, celery, onions and water chestnuts and stir fry for 2 minutes more. Then add pea pods, pineapple chunks with syrup and broth; stir fry 2 more minutes. In small bowl, mix together sugar, cornstarch, ginger, vinegar and soy sauce; pour over chicken and vegetables. Reduce heat and simmer until thickened, about 2 minutes. Serve over rice or Chinese noodles. Makes 4 servings.

Note: Don't overcook; vegetables should be bright green and slightly crunchy.

Chester Co. chefs to compete in lamb cook-off

COCHRANVILLE — Chester County's amateur chefs will be vying for honors at the Grand Lamb Cook-Off sponsored by the Chester County Sheep and Wool Growers at 2 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 12 at the Unionville Community Fair.

The lamb cooking contest is part of the first Wool Festival ever held in Chester County. Other features of the festival will be a spinning contest, a sheep to shawl contest, a skein and garment exhibit, and a "Shepherd's Lead" fashion show.

Gourmet fans who enter the lamb cooking contest will have their culinary creations judged on taste (40 points), appearance (20 points), originality (20 points), and ease of preparation (20 points). Any cut of lamb may be used with at least one pound of lamb being part of the ingredients.

All cooking must be done on the fairgrounds in the designated cook-off area. Contestants will furnish their own cooking equipment. Electric outlets will be furnished so that crockpots, hot plates, small ovens, woks, and rotisseries as well as charcoal grills may be used.

Prizes for the winning lamb dish will be $25, first place, $15 second, and $10, third. The entry fee is $2. Entry forms and complete contest rules may be obtained by contacting Peggy Devine, Box 308, West Grove, PA 19390, telephone 869-9379.

Discarded junk makes excellent artificial reefs for ocean life

WASHINGTON — When Bill Donaldson, a former mayor of Pontiac, Mich., retired to Stuart, Fla., he had no idea that he would become king of an underwater hill of junk beloved to local fisherman.

But there it is, the Bill Donaldson Reef, named after one of the leaders in artificial-reef development by residents of the southern Florida community of 9,500.

Hundreds of toilets, bathtubs, and washbowls, 75,000 concrete-weighted tires, 100 dumpsters, two school-bus bodies, a 200-foot ship, a 188-foot sand dredge, and nine steel work barges–all this has hit the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean to form three artificial reefs, since the Stuart Sailfish Club and Bill Donaldson set out to improve local fishing in the 1970s.

Helping Mother Nature

Stuart's residents are among hundreds of individuals and local groups all along the U.S. coast who are sinking both dollars and debris into improving fish habitat. They're putting all kinds of discarded objects on ocean floors to create reefs for fish where nature neglected to put them.

Ninety percent of the ocean floor around the United States is a sand and mud wasteland with little plant growth. The artificial reefs provide growing surfaces for plants and animals that fish eat.

A properly constructed artificial reef increases an area's fish population over time. In theory, it initially drains neighboring natural reefs of some fish, but it also provides new shelter from predators and new food that reduces competition on the natural reefs. Within two years, both the natural and artificial reefs become crowded with fish.

What sounds good in theory looks good in practice, according to studies conducted by the National Marine Fisheries Service, a federal agency. A 1971-74 test at Murrell's Inlet, S.C., for example, showed that catches over a tire-and-vessel artificial reef equaled those over nearby natural rock reefs.

Impressive test results at sea don't always please on-shore environmentalists. But Richard Stone of the Fisheries Service says he's received very little criticism since he began developing artificial reefs in the 1960s.

"People don't object to enhancing areas if they can be shown that it's not going to be detrimental to something that's already there," Stone says. "What they would object to is to just dispose of material–ocean dumping under the guise of ocean reefs–or if they thought you were pitching things off that did have some toxic by-products or putting something down on existing live-bottom areas or coral reefs."

Plastic Works Best

Just about anything that can be sunk will help build a reef, Stone says, but some materials are more durable than others. Thin metal objects such as car bodies and refrigerators deteriorate rapidly and move around too much if they're not weighted properly. But many other metal scraps, including cleaned-out ships and collapsed oil rigs, have made successful reefs, he says.

The most effective fish condominiums, according to a test conducted by a marine consulting firm, are fiberglass-reinforced plastic units. These units can be adjusted to fit various ocean-bottom terrains and to reach different heights depending on the type of fish desired. Some highly sought fish often are found on taller structures.

A diver explores the coral-encrusted steel beams of a British mail carrier that sunk more than 100 years ago in the Virgin Islands. Today people are sinking old boats, weighted tires, abandoned oil rigs and other objects so that marine plants and animals can grow on them. The more than 300 artificial reefs off the U.S. coasts provide new food and mean better catches for sport fishermen and better scenery for divers.

The durable plastic units can be transported more easily than old ships or weighted tires. Unfortunately, they are now available only from Japanese manufacturers in very limited quantities.

The Japanese, world leaders in reef development, have used these units successfully for seven years. The Japanese reef program, unlike the grass-roots efforts in the United States, is centrally planned and subsidized.

In the United States the majority of reefs are for recreational fishing, but in Japan reef development is carried out by and for commercial fisherman. Another difference between the two countries' policies is legal–here the ocean is open to any U.S. fisherman, but Japan recognizes ocean ownership rights, and the builder of a reef there holds the exclusive rights to fish it.

Stone says he doubts U.S. government participation will ever equal that of the Japanese government, but he hopes state governments will become more involved.

"I'd like to see the states become leaders in building reefs," he says. "I'd like to see them become more sophisticated, develop siting plans, and have the money to do it right."

Innovative Private Financing

But state funds for reef construction have been undependable in the past. Because of this undependability, Stone says, many reefs in the United States have been financed by local sports fishing and diving clubs, often through imaginative fund-raisers such as Bill Donaldson.

Fall is the best time to start a new lawn, according to Extension agronomists at Penn State. The general steps in establishing good turfgrass include:

1. Have your soil tested to determine the limestone and fertilizer requirements.
2. Rough grade the area, removing all debris including stones.
3. Lime according to soil test recommendations.
4. Apply basic fertilizer (phosphate and/or potash) according to soil test recommendations
5. Apply any soil organic matter recommended in the soil test report
6 Till materials (Step 3, 4, 5) into a four-to six-inch soil depth.
7 Finish grade by hand or machine raking.
8. Apply starter fertilizer (nitrogen, phosphate, potash) according to soil test recommendation and work into top inch of soil.
9. Apply seed by dividing total seed quantity into two equal lots, sowing one lot in one direction and the second lot at right angles to the first with a mechanical seeder or spreader
10. Rake lightly or drag area to cover seed no deeper than one quarter inch.
11. Roll area lightly to firm soil around seed.
12. Mulch seeded area with clean straw or marsh hay. Light mulches may be left on area to decompose but heavy mulches should be removed as soon as grass germinates.

Discarded junk

In Stuart, for example, citizens raised money to tow and sink an old barge by selling 10,000 shares of stock in the barge at $1 a share. Contributors received certificates that said, "We Cared And We Shared." Others paid $100 each to have their name painted on enormous gas tanks before they were sunk.

U.S. industry also has supported reef development. Oil and gas companies have made the largest corporate contributions in the form of abandoned oil rigs.

Federal involvement now is limited to the Army Corps of Engineers' issuance of permits for new reefs. Stone is working with agencies and individuals to develop national guidelines that would improve the process.

Stone says he isn't worried about overbuilding. With proper planning, he says, there's little chance of cluttering the vast ocean floor in the next 50 years.

THE MICRO WAY

LANI BLOOMER

Shoofly Cake And Pie

Lancaster County is famous for its Pennsylvania Dutch residents, and one of my favorite Pennsylvania Dutch foods is shoofly pie. I was first intrigued by the unusual name of this dessert as a child. Then when I had my first taste, I was hooked! So in honor of our Pennsylvania Dutch heritage, here are two high tech microwave versions of this old time treat.

When you bake pies in your microwave, you must cook the pie crust first, before adding the pie filling. Pie crusts will not brown when baked in a microwave, but do get light and flaky, even though they are pale. Any pie crust recipe may be used and can be prebaked as follows:

Roll crust and fit to glass or plastic pie plate, taking care not to stretch the dough. Flute edges as desired. Lay a piece of waxed paper over the crust and gently set a slightly smaller pie plate on top of the paper (right "in" the pie crust). A round flat bottomed casserole dish may be used instead of a smaller pie plate.

Microwave on high for three minutes. Remove top dish and gently peel off waxed paper. (The dish and paper keep the crust from puffing up as it is baked.) Return crust to oven and bake for two-to-three minutes longer on high, until it is dry and flaky all over. The cooking time for each crust will vary a little, because of differences in moisture and thickness.

If the crust puffs up during the last baking time, gently press it back down as soon as it is removed from the microwave. A crust that has been prebaked in a range oven may be used if you prefer.

If you are not familiar with molasses, unsulphured molasses is less bitter than the sulphured kind. I use "Grandma's Molasses" by Motts, which is available in grocery stores.

Shoofly Pie

10-inch pre-baked pie crust

Crumb Mixture:

1½ cups flour
½ cup light brown sugar, packed
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1/8 teaspoon each nutmeg and ginger
¼ cup butter

Molasses Mixture:

¾ cup water
½ teaspoon baking soda
¾ cup unsulphured molasses.

1. Combine dry ingredients for crumb mixture in a bowl, and cut in butter until you have a mealy texture. A food processor does this job in nothing flat, if you have one! Use metal blade and mix dry ingredients first. Cut butter in three-to-four chunks and process until mealy.

2. Heat water in a two-cup measure on high for two minutes, until very hot, but not boiling. Stir in soda, until it dissolves, then gently stir in molasses. (If the water is boiling, or you stir the molasses and soda too hard, it may foam all over the place.)

3. Put ¼ of the crumbs in the bottom of the baked pie crust. Pour about ½ cup of the molasses mixture over top. Repeat two more times, using ¼ of the crumbs and a ½ cup molasses each time. Sprinkle last ¼ of the crumbs on the top of the pie.

4. Cook on medium high power (70,7) for 10 to 12 minutes until the center puffs up and is firm. (If you oven does not have 70 percent power, use high for seven-eight minutes instead.) Let stand for 10 minutes before serving. Makes 1 10-inch pie.

If you don't have time to prepare and prebake a pie crust, try making a shoofly cake. This cake lacks the gooey black bottom you find in the pie, but the flavor is the same–delicious!

Shoofly Cake

2 cups flour
1 cup brown sugar, packed
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ginger
1/8 teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup margarine or butter
¾ cup water
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ cup unsulphured molasses

1. Grease an 8-inch square or 9-inch round microwave cake pan with solid shortening. Sprinkle sugar over the grease, tipping the pa 'o coat all over, tap out any excess. (Do this just as you would grease and flour a cake pan for the range, but use sugar, instead of flour, for the microwave.)

2. Mix first six dry ingredients together, then cut in butter until crumbly. (Use a food processor with a metal blade if you have one, see pie directions above.) Remove one cup crumb mixture and set aside for topping.

3. Heat water in microwave on high for two minutes until hot. Stir in soda until dissolved, and then stir in molasses. Add this mixture to the remaining crumb mixture and mix until combined. (With a food processor, add the liquids through the feed tube as the machine is running. Mix just until combined.)

4. Pour the batter in the prepared cake pan, and sprinkle reserved crumbs over the top.

5. Bake cake uncovered, on medium (50,5) for 15 minutes, until the center rises. Rotate the pan every five minutes if the cake rises unevenly. Microwave on high for two minutes longer, until a toothpick inserted near the center comes out clean. Let stand 10 minutes before serving.

Serves 8.

NOTE: The times above are for microwaves with 600-700 watts of power. For 500-600 W, add 10 seconds to each minute; for 400-500 W, add 20 seconds to each minute.

GIGANTIC SELECTION IN Lancaster Farming's CLASSIFIEDS

Lebanon Flower Show draws record number of entries

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

LEBANON – The cooperative weather of the summer and early fall made a perfect growing season for flower lovers, and the Lebanon County Flower Club had record entries in their annual flower show held last week at the Lebanon Valley Exposition grounds.

According to show chairman Mrs. Winfield Finkbiner, there were 505 entries from 101 exhibitors in the show, which featured a newspaper theme for its various categories.

Mrs. Helen Miller was the Grand Sweepstakes winner for the 24th year in a row. Helen, 1021 Quentin Road, said with a laugh that she'll retire when she has won 25 times. She adds, "I guess they're all hoping I'll soon retire."

To win the sweepstakes category, Helen took 13 blue ribbons in the judging out of 23 separate entries. She also received some reds. She said, "I start practically everything from seeds, and start some in December. It's a lot of work and I don't have enough windowsills to hold all my flowers." She adds, "I can hardly wait to put them out in the yard in the spring."

Although entering flower shows came after she joined the club, Helen says, "When I was a kid, I always loved flowers." She is somewhat casual about her ability to have winning exhibits at the show, but acknowledges, "It is especially hard to find three specimens," for the specimen category

At 17, Ann Grumbine is probably the youngest exhibitor to win in the tri-color category which signifies excellence in a particular area. Ann's winning exhibit was in the interpretative category, "Pennsylvania Renaissance at Mt. Hope Winery," and featured a Mount Hope wine bottle with three roses signifying the War of the Roses, a grape vine and some grapes.

A senior at Eastern Lebanon County School, Ann says, "I love making arrangements." About winning, she says, "I'm very happy."

No stranger to the winner's circle, Ann won a tri-color award with a pedestal arrangement when she was 12 years old. A 4-H'er for seven years, she also created a 4-H exhibit for the show on making potpourri Ann is a national winner in the horticultural 4-H program and will travel to National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago in November

Ann's parents own Grumbine's Flowers and greenhouse, so she is no stranger to fine flowers. She hopes to major in horticulture at Penn State when she graduates.

Mrs. Richard Miller has won the Grand Sweepstakes prize for the past 24 years. Here she stands with a prize-winning coleus, which helped her in winning a total of 13 blue ribbons from the 23 exhibits she entered in the flower show.

She says, "I love the idea of doing research and finding new things."

Another tri-color winner is Norma Pantelich, Lebanon, who won in the house plant division with a hoya plant which was blooming. Norma says that although she has been a member of the club for "at least 10 years," this is the first time she has exhibited. She adds, "I hit the jackpot the first time." She said she never plans to enter the show because she thinks her houseplants are not good enough, and then goes home and wishes she had entered.

Norma says, "My husband urged me to enter. My hoya is usually not blooming. This plant thrives on neglect." She points out that she has so many house plants "you wouldn't believe it."

Edith Kreiser, Lebanon, has exhibited for 14 years and over the years has won several blue ribbons This year she was tri-color winner in the specimen class, displaying three identical marigolds. She said she picked them on Monday morning before the destructive storms which passed through the area She pointed out, "You have to search to find them." She added that it is best to pick specimens early in the day and put them in water to condition them.

Alice Levengood, R7, Lebanon, exhibited at the show and captured three blue ribbons, along with some seconds and thirds. A member of Farm Women Society #17, she said she enjoys houseplants and outside flowers. "It keeps me busy all around the house. I also have an herb garden."

Alice likes to encourage others to enter, and is proud that her daughter-in-law got a blue ribbon on her first time entry Alice says, "I always enter and I try to enter every category I can."

For the first time this year there were several children's categories, which is something Mrs Finkbinere would like to encourage more participation in by area young people

Crawford County 4-H'ers excel at Northwest District Dairy Show

BY BARBARA RADER
Staff Correspondent

MEADVILLE — In one of the largest shows for the district, 330 project animals were exhibited at the 38th annual Northwestern District 4-H Dairy Show, held Sept. 7, at the Crawford County Fairgrounds.

With all breeds represented at the 10-county show, more than 200 entries secured blue ribbons and the opportunity to go on to state competition in Harrisburg, Sept. 23.

Type judge for the Holstein and Ayrshire shows was Jim Lewis, a Holstein breeder from Orient, Ohio, who first judged the northwest district show some 30 years ago.

Judging showmanship was Agri-Graphics photographer Sylvia Cooper of Slippery Rock, and Mark Campbell Jr., Ford City, selected the shows' master fitters.

Type judge for the other breeds was Select Sires representative Steve Moff, Columbiana, Ohio. Gene Schurman, Indiana County extension agent made the fitting selections, and John Marchezak, well-known Guernsey and Holstein breeder from Bentleyville, selected the showmanship winners.

Eighty-two exhibitors earned both the master fitter and master showman awards on their project animals.

Crawford County exhibitors showed the most champions, with thirteen winners in the various breed shows. Mercer, Lawrence and Butler counties each took five championships, while Erie and Clarion County each claimed one.

Following are the top three placings in each class.

NJ FFA'ers to test judging skills in statewide contest

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — Members of the New Jersey Association of FFA Chapters will be on the campus of Cook College, Rutgers University for the statewide interscholastic fall judging contests on Oct. 31.

Teams from 39 chapters will test their agricultural or horticultural skills in land judging, weed identification and control, fruits and vegetables identification, and small engine trouble shooting.

Chapters competing in this semi-annual event are from high schools across the state.

The highest scoring team in dairy foods contest competes at the regional competition in West Springfield, Mass., next September, then at the national competition in Kansas City, Mo., in November of 1986. The first place land judging team will move on to the National Competition next spring in Oklahoma.

The chapter that accumulates the most points in the fall, spring and summer contests will receive the H.O. Sampson trophy. Sampson, a member of the staff of Rutgers University, was one of the original founders of FFA.

PFA establishes scholarships

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association Memorial Scholarship has been established at Penn State to provide financial assistance to outstanding undergraduate agriculture students, the Board of Trustees was told.

The scholarship is available to students enrolled in the College of Agriculture. Consideration will be given to those who are members or whose parents or guardians are members of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association.

Students who have demonstrated academic ability and who have a need for financial assistance in order to meet necessary college expenses will be considered.

The initial principal was created by a $10,000 donation by the association last August, and scholarships will be awarded when the principal reaches $15,000. Contributions to the memorial fund can be made in the name of deceased association leaders, members or staff.

Scholarship recipients will be selected by the Scholarship Committee of the College of Agriculture from among those identified as eligible members of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association, with the approval of the Office of Student Aid.

The number and amount of scholarship each year will be determined by the selection committee, but will, in no case, be less than $300.

Scholarships will be awarded for one year but may be renewed if recipients continue to be eligible.

Ladies Have You Heard?

By Doris Thomas

Lancaster Extension Home Economist

Credit Is A Costly Convenience

By now, you probably know who pays for credit–you do! If you have overextended your budget and are trying to get back on track, now may be a good time to look at the extra cost of using credit.

A credit card is not a license to spend. It is a convenience you pay for by promising to pay the bill plus interest. While whipping out the plastic may have seemed easy some months ago, paying up now may be very painful.

Some consumers are not only paying the price of giving and spending plus interest, but have tried to get out of a tight situation by borrowing again to repay the accumulated costs. Consolidating store and bank charges into one payment you can afford may seem like the answer to a badly stretched budget but in the long run, you will be paying more and more.

How do you know how much extra you are paying? Don't be satisifed with a statement that you will only have one "low" monthly payment. Before you sign a consolidating loan, an installment loan, or even agree to the credit terms on a charge account, read the fine print. Be sure you understand the annual percentage rate you will be charged on the balance and find out how interest charges are calculated over the life of the contract.

Always look for the monthly percentage rate, the annual percentage rate and your account balance on each bill you pay. However, it is also important to examine the dollar cost of the loan as well. For instance, $1,000 worth of retail goods will cost you at least an additional $180 extra if you pay for it over the year instead of in full when first billed. That cash amount may mean more to you than a figure of 18 percent.

Most charge accounts are calculated according to the "average daily balance" method. If yours is, the longer it takes you to pay your bill, the more expensive your purchases will be. It is to your advantage to make payments on your account very soon after you receive your monthly statements, and to make new purchases close to the end of your billing cycle. Do not extend the use of credit any longer than you absolute have to or you will pay unnecessarily.

Ten Simple Steps Can Mean Mealtime Success

Did you ever announce a delicious dinner surprise–and out came a flop, a failure, simply goo, or even a dried out brick? Don't despair.

Here are ten easy steps to follow to ensure mealtime success.

1. Be sure to read the entire recipe before you begin.

2. Understand cooking terms; look them up in a basic cookbook if you aren't sure. There really is a difference between whipping and folding, between boiling and braising, and between poaching and steaming.

3. Assemble all ingredients. Don't substitute ingredients unless you check your cookbook for equivalents.

4. Organize in advance. Chop, cut, peel, and grind before mixing ingredients.

5. Measure carefully. Use standardized measuring cups and spoons, not tableware.

6. Add ingredients in order. Often recipes require particular reactions to occur among ingredients for a successful product.

7. Use the size pan your recipe recommends; another may cause over or under cooking–or even overflowing since many batters rise as they cook.

8. Do cook at the oven temperature specified in the recipe. If you suspect your oven is inaccurate, get an oven thermometer and use it regularly.

9. Check your dish before the official cooking time is up. Even the best ovens and range top burners can vary, and you'll need to adjust the cooking time accordingly.

10. Use reliable recipes. Sometimes those written out by a friend omit steps or give vague measurements.

Volunteers sought for sheep to shawl committee

HARRISBURG – Do you have an interest in sheep, wool or public relations? If so, your talents can be put to excellent use on the Pennsylvania Sheep to Shawl Committee.

The Sheep to Shawl Contest, preparing for its sixth year at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show, has gained in popularity with both spinners, weavers and observers. During the contest, a shearer shears a sheep, then three spinners weave the freshly sheared wool into yarn. A weaver then creates a unique hand woven shawl, often with a variety of naturally dyed colors to enhance the one-of-a-kind shawl. Following awards, the shawls are auctioned to the crowd. Last year's national record price was $650 paid by Rich Brandt Farm Real Estate of Reading, Berks County.

Persons who have wool knowledge, are experienced spinners or weavers, or want to help with the promotion of the contest are invited to serve on a newly formed Pennsylvania Sheep to Shawl Committee. The Committee will meet once a year to discuss rules, select judges, solicit award sponsors and develop a promotional schedule. Many other states, county and local organizers have based their contest on Pennsylvania's Sheep to Shawl Contest.

For more information regarding the Pennsylvania Sheep to Shawl Committee, write to: SHEEP TO SHAWL, Bureau of Markets, 2301 N. Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110-9408, or call Joan Liesau at (717) 787-5086.

State dairy winner says FFA teaches responsibility

BY WENDY WEHR

KUTZTOWN — Every year the judges pore over a pile of FFA record books, intent on choosing the best entry in each category. Sometimes the decisions are tough, because many students and many school chapters deserve recognition for their hard work and exceptional projects.

At other times, one student or one chapter will earn repeat honors for their outstanding entries in state contests.

"I was really surprised I got it," admits Stacey Meyers, the 1985 Kutztown Area High School graduate who earned this year's state FFA award in dairy proficiency. The honor was especially unexpected because in 1984 a fellow Kutztown FFA'er and neighbor of Stacey's also claimed the state dairy proficiency title.

Stacey is the daughter of Donald and Vernette Meyers, operators of Dancing Bell Farm, situated north of Lenhartsville in the hills of Northern Berks County. She keeps 11 registered Holsteins in her family's herd of 55 milking head.

In 1984, as a high school junior Stacey had won her chapter dairy proficiency award. This year her Kutztown FFA advisors, Christine Williams and Donald Reinert, encouraged her to compete in the state competition.

While earning the award required accurate record-keeping on her FFA dairy projects, Stacey is the first to admit that the award itself is not nearly as important as what she has learned through FFA. And that's not strictly an education in dairy management and production.

"I still think the biggest thing you learn is responsibility," states Stacey about her FFA experiences. As treasurer of her chapter, chairman of the group's "Building Our American Communities" committee, and Berks County FFA historian during her senior year, she quickly learned what it means to successfully balance school activities with work responsibilities at home.

"You have to learn how to stick with it," she adds, and accept all the different personalities when people work together on projects. And it's awfully hard, but necessary, to learn to say no, when too many commitments crowd in on your time.

But Stacey learned these lessons well, according to her FFA advisor, Christine Williams.

"She was a real leader in our club this past year," says Williams about Stacey's work in the chapter. For the BOAC committee she made the initial contact and helped set up a visiting program with some area senior citizens. As chapter treasurer, adds Williams, Stacey devoted at least a school period every week to keeping the group's financial records in order.

The stint as treasurer tied in nicely with her future goals. This fall Stacey began studying accounting at York College of Pennsylvania, a major that may or may not lead her back to work on the farm.

While busy with school activities, Stacey also kept up her interest in her project animals and in her family's farm. Attending college is in part possible for her because she was able to save money from her dairy projects and farm work to help with tuition costs.

She began with her first 4-H project calf in 1976. That calf is now an 88-point, 15-year-old cow that's given the FFA'er nine heifer calves and just two bulls over the years. Stacey has added to this foundation with a few sale purchases, including a consignment from the 1984 Pennsylvania State Calf Sale and a Keystone Farms animal that she got at this year's Berks Holstein Club sale.

Responsibility has been an important lesson to be learned at home for Stacey, too. She remembers that even as a youngster her parents gave her a chance to sweep up in the barn to earn a little extra money.

On the farm she has helped with feeding the youngstock and with milking. Some of her best animals are achieving 20,000-pound milk production records.

Her dairy animals include two Astronaut daughters, two Bells, a Valiant, a Spirit and a few other by well-known sires. A few years ago she sold a heifer out of her first 4-H calf to Korea.

Stacey doesn't want to make any predictions about the future of the dairy industry. But she does say that, no matter what, "you've got to have a lot of patience to put up with all the hard work" of dairy farming.

Stacey Meyers is a Kutztown High School graduate who earned the state FFA dairy proficiency award.

The Office Works can help you with your agricultural problem solving.

We have been helping farmers for three years now. That's because we know farming. Jim Landis, our agricultural computing specialist grew up on a farm and now he has a 200 acre cash crop farming operation. Our satisfied customers include dairymen, poultrymen, beef and hog farmers, county agents, feed mills, Vo-Ag teachers and other farming specialists.

Let us show you what a computer can do on the farm. We offer seminars that provide a hands-on learning experience. We'll teach you how to use a computer and show you what a computer can do for you. You'll see how a computer purchase for the farm would pay for itself! The cost for seminars is modest - $15 per couple which includes all class materials and lunch. Plus, you'll get a coupon for $100 off a computer purchase! The schedule is below. All seminars are Tuesdays from 10am-3 pm.

NFU warns of 'collapse' of U.S. farm economy

CORNING, IA — "Imports are killing the American pork producers," DeVon Woodland, president of the National Farmers Organization, claimed in telegrams to the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the U.S. International Trade Commission.

Woodland said the producers' position was "totally eroded" this week with the Iowa and Nebraska interior markets dropping to $38-39 per hundredweight.

"This level of market is creating a $10-15 per head loss for the pork producer. He just cannot live with the approximate 7 percent imports of the federally inspected domestic slaughter," Woodland said.

The telegrams were addressed to John Block. the agriculture secretary, and to Paula Stern, ITC chairperson.

Woodland said "this callous disregard for the future of American agriculture must stop and our domestic producers must be protected from outside influences such as pork imports."

With no further controls implemented, Woodland noted he "foresees domestic pork prices plunging into the $35/cwt. range or lower, causing financial liquidation ot existing pork facilities nationwide."

"The American hog producer can return to profitable levels only when he doesn't have to battle various agencies of the administration," Woodland concluded.

Experts see slow growth, service in ag computers

LAKE GENEVA, WI – What is the outlook for growth in the ag computing market? Who will buy software? Where will the market be geographically? How will the products and services be distributed? When will farmers start buying?

These questions and others were explored by ag computing experts, including two from the major farm equipment companies, educators, ag lenders, farmers and other agribusinessmen at the recent Association of Agricultural Computing Companies "Trends '85" Conference in Lake Geneva, WI.

More than 100 ag computing industry leaders from across the U.S. gathered at this first-ever event to gain insight about the direction of the ag computing market.

Optimistic view

Dave Wolf, manager, computer products at Sperry New Holland, New Holland, PA, opened the conference by explaining the opportunity Sperry New Holland sees in the farm services and farm management business area.

"There are three factors forming the growth we see in the farm management/services area," he says:

1. Farmers are managing larger units.

2 Increased efficiency is necessary to survive in the farming business because of lower margins.

3. Management of cash flow is critical.

About two years ago, Sperry New Holland decided to aggressively market its computers and software through their machinery dealerships with specifically trained personnel to sell computers. Their AG-COMMAND (TM) Computer Centers provide computers, software, training, service and support to area farmers and businesses.

Another perspective

In contrast, Ken Grenier, marketing services support manager at Deere & Company, presented 1979 and 1984 market research data showing why Deere decided not to sell ag computers and software at this time. He predicted that there will probably be no mass adoption of on-farm computers for 8 to 10 years.

"Our 1979 study showed the rapidly developing PC industry was a mess and farm computer software has not matured yet. By 1984, the industry was more stable and mature software began to appear," Grenier says. The 1984 study also shows a high cost of entry into the ag computing market, and indicates little penalty with a later entry.

Grenier summarized his presentation by saying, "eventual market sales of 300,000 to 500,000 farm units seems assured. Slow steady growth appears to be the long-term trend."

Industry sets its destiny

From the university Extension's perspective, Dr. Jim McGrann, Extension economist at Texas A&M University, says there are several things Land Grant university employees can do to enhance the adoption of computers on the farm.

"We need to support the educational effort in this industry Not only do we need to teach farmers about computers, but we need to help them learn about subject matters, like accounting and nutrition, so they can effectively use a computer. We need to do a better job of education all around, especially in finance.

"We also need to work with lenders, hardware and software vendors to help them understand the needs of the farmers. And to the target audience, farmers, we must provide in-depth education about the benefits of computers," says McGrann.

From the farmer's eye

Several farmers shared their thoughts from the grass roots level of the ag computing industry. This was an opportunity for farmers to tell industry leaders how to improve their computer products and services to better serve farmers' needs and sell more products.

Craig Beane, a Fort Atkinson, WI, dairy farmer, says if he were in charge of a software company, he would.

- Instruct programmers to 'KISS"–keep it simple, stupid!
- Build a basic program that could be expanded
- Provide service and on-farm assistance like that which is now available for two-way radio repair, forage testing and milking equipment. ("Farmers are willing to pay for this service").
- Provide a hotline for help; someone who can "walk" a user through the program.

Beane adds to this list the future needs of software:

- Easier, on-screen instructions.
- More attention to what farmers want, not what the programmer thinks farmers should have.
- Implement a monthly or bi-monthly service route. Mail a card that notifies the farmer in advance of when a service representative will arrive.
- Help start user groups to allow farmers to share ideas.
- Honesty. If the product doesn't do what a user wants, say so.

Other trends revealed

At the "Trends '85" conference, ag lenders also discussed why farmers need computers and new business financers explained what to look for in an ag software company from an investor's viewpoint.

More than 93 percent of the conference attendees rated the conference as excellent or very good. Anyone who would like to know more about the ag computing market trends revealed at this conference can order written conference proceedings, audio or video tapes. The Association of Agricultural Computing Companies, which hosted this conference, is dedicated to the education and promotion of computer technology applications in agriculture. Its membership consists of representatives from agribusinesses, universities, media and others interested in the ag computing market.

The Association was formed last November as a professional organization to provide credible leadership in projects too large for individual companies, such as market development, consumer education, industry standards and government affairs.

LANCASTER FARMING 30 Years Of Service 1955 1985

The Dairy Business

By Newton Bair

What is a farm worth?

I recently had the opportunity to study and evaluate nearly 100 recent sales of farms and land in Lebanon County. It was the kind of listing that real estate brokers like to use for comparison in appraising the present value of a farm. I question whether that kind of comparison is true and valid, although it is certainly widely used.

Comparative sales are often the strongest criteria in judging the value of a farm. But they can be misleading

There have been farm sales within the past two years that range from $1600 to $7990 an acre. Granting the wide range in production capacity, one can usually say that most of these farms brought what they were worth. Unfortunately, some of them were priced too high to ever be profitable as a working family farm.

In the heat of competitive bidding, or in the intense desire to "own a piece of the earth," land often brings a price that is purely speculative. If inflation takes off again, and if agricultural production begins to show better profit margins than at present, and if population growth puts more pressure on land for housing, then some of that $3000 to $5000 an acre land might pay off.

That's okay for a speculator, but might spell disaster for a farm family trying to pay for it out of farm profits.

Pricing a farm for profit

How can a young family determine a fair price for a farm? I always advise a young family starting out in farming to write [illegible] charts of possible outcomes. The first one establishes the family goals, such as raising a good healthy family, building a good herd of cows, owning good machinery, and making enough to live well and pay the bills. They will usually project yesterday's highest prices and lowest costs. The scenario is always favorable and looks good on paper, if it ever gets that far.

The second scenario should be a very realistic one in which only the average prices for products, including milk and sale cattle, are used. Expenses should be calculated at average or better than average, to allow for inflation, greater than normal purchases, and unforeseen shortages. In either case, amortization of the farm debt must be calculated, and in this case, particularly, allowance must be made for fluctuation in interest rates. Too often, this item is grossly underestimated in a young family's projections and dreams.

Now for the third scenario for buying a farm. This is seldom considered, because it would immediately dash a young family's dreams into the dust. After the commitment is made to buy the farm, there are two, or three years of drought. (Of course that can't happen here.) A tornado wrecks the barn and destroys the corn crop. (Have faith baby, that only happens in Butler or Erie County.) Johne's disease strikes the herd and p[illegible]duction plummets (Not me, I know how to handle that one.) Someone forgot that three cows were treated for mastitis, and the milk entered the tank. No sales for a month. (Now, who ever heard of such a dumb thing!) The list can go on ad infinitum

Every one of those things can happen, have happened, and will happen again. None of them need necessarily sink the ship, but for the one who forgot to allow for the worst possible scenario, just one set-back could cost the farm.

The main reason for the last projection in a young family's dream is not to scare the life out of them, but to make them aware of some of life's probabilities. Obviously, the second projection will succeed, if the figures show a potential profit. The first one, which is too optimistic, will often fail, even though a paper profit is shown.

It is sad to see a young family lose their farm because they did not allow for unforeseen expenses and lower-than-expected income. And it is too often the size of the farm debt that makes the difference when adversity strikes

Hungary given loan guarantees

BUDAPEST - U S Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block announced that $22 million in Commodity Credit Corporation credit guarantees have been authorized for sales of U S agricultural products to Hungary

The announcement came during a day of meetings with Hungarian agricultural and trade officials, including Minister of Agriculture and Food Jeno Vancsa. Block stopped here to discuss trade and other agricultural matters en route to Washington from the Soviet Union, where he held similar talks with Soviet officials.

In Washington, Melvin E Sims, general sales manager for the U.S Department of Agriculture's Foreign Agricultural Service, said the credit guarantees will provide the following coverage for purchases by Hungary $13 5 million on sales of protein meals (soybean, cottonseed, and sunflowerseed), $2 million on sales of soy protein products for human consumption; $5 million on sales of cotton; $1 million on sales of animal breeding materials including semen, embryos, and breeding animals; and $0 5 million on sales of shelled almonds.

Hungary imported $42.6 million worth of U.S. agricultural commodities last year, mostly soybean products. Programs covered by this announcement are for up to three-year terms. The guarantor can be the National Bank of Hungary and/or other eligible banks.

New rules on peeled potatoes?

WASHINGTON – The U.S. Department of Agriculture has proposed revision of the voluntary U.S. standards for grades of peeled potatoes.

John J. Gardner, marketing official with USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, said the proposed rule would improve the grade standards and promote orderly and efficient marketing of peeled potatoes.

The proposed rule would delete the reference to sulfur dioxide in the product description, but retain the reference to treatment, to prevent discoloration, by means permissible under provisions of the Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

The proposed rule also would replace the dual grade nomenclature with single, letter grade designations.

USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service establishes grade standards and official grading for many agricultural products. Use of the standards and the grading service is voluntary and is self-supporting.

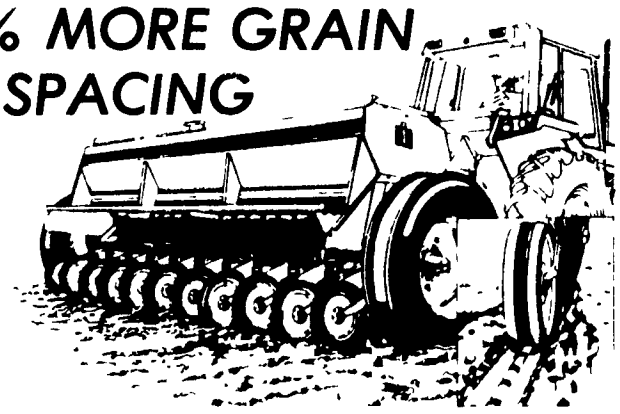
GET UP TO 25% MORE GRAIN WITH 6" SEED SPACING



Drill With The Case International "5100 Special"

Outstanding accuracy begins with IH feed cups that deliver seed uniformly. Dual rib press wheels then compact the soil around the seed and gently "pat" the top to prevent air holes. The result is uniform germination and an emergence toward higher yields.

• 30.5 inch extendable hopper
• Easy drive-in convenience
• Automatic air inlet

BINKLEY & HURST BROS., INC.
Your Dealer Who Stocks Your Needs

KNIGHT "350" MANURE SPREADER

KNIGHT "410" MANURE SPREADER

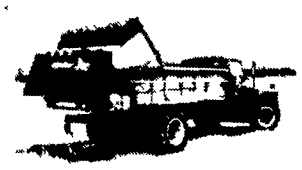
Dairymen and cattlemen alike have found that increased capacity and the maneuverability of the #410 spreader advantageous to their operations.

The #410 offers the low profile of the model #350 yet carries a larger load — 20 4 longer and 2 deeper. 4 x 6 hardwood top rails are standard. Available with 8 bolt 20 tandem wheels or the #410 may also be truck mounted.

The box construction s heavy duty all steel with 10 ga bottom and 11 ga s des welded as one unit. Heavy auger style beaters with alloy steel ripper teeth shred frozen manure for easy spreading. Hydro fluid endgate seals sloppy manure. Auger type top beaters spread that extra high load.

You can expect top performance and you'll get it from the Knight #410 manure spreader.



The model #410 may be truck mounted for those operations that need a self propelled unit (Model #350 shown)

FEEDING SYSTEMS

The main gathering auger is heavy duty 16" diameter, with 5/16" flighting mounted on a 4" tube. The auger has adjustable front and rear 14 gau. galvanized shields, for maximum capacity. The auger is powered by a 60 lb. gearbox which brings forage to the center for the delivery chain.
To deliver the high volume of forage from the sweep auger to the inside chute, a heavy duty hook chain with hardened cutters is used to convey the forage. The stainless steel top shield is easily removed to adjust the chain if needed. The plate and V pipe keep the delivery chain positioned over the inside chute in the forage.

USDA to study new breed of imported sheep

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A white-faced, meaty sheep native to the Netherlands, valued for its lean meat, will be bred for the first time in this country by U.S. Department of Agriculture researchers.

USDA's Agricultural Research Service imported the breed, Texel, from Finland and Denmark to see what potential it may have for the U.S. sheep industry, said Robert Oltjen, director of the agency's Roman L. Hruska U.S. Meat Animal Research Center, Clay Center, Neb.

One possibility could be the Texel becoming a new source of lean lamb for consumers, he said. That could come either from breeding the sheep itself or from crossing it with domestic sheep.

"We are studying Texel sheep for any possible help in increasing the efficiency and quality of U.S. lamb production," he said. Texel's growth rate, feed requirements and survival rate of newborns also will be studied at Clay Center.

Any impact the Texel may have on the lamb industry will be a number of years away, Oltjen said. All the sheep are in quarantine for five years, including 31 lambs born by ewes that were pregnant when they were brought to Clay Center.

USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service established the quarantine until the Texel can be certified free of scrapies, a debilitating disease of sheep brain tissues. Scrapies often takes several years to show up in flocks.

"Texel is the first exotic sheep breed to be imported from Europe since the 1960's," Oltjen said. USDA then shipped in another breed, Finnsheep, for various studies, including its high birth rate.

Oltjen said imports by the U.S. sheep industry have been prohibited because of concern about scrapies. USDA has taken elaborate precautions to keep the Texel isolated at Clay Center and yet make it possible for researchers to undertake studies, he said.

As part of the research, animal scientists will compare Texel and domestic Suffolk for growth and other characteristics, said center geneticist Kreg A. Laymaster.

"We may be able to provide information about U.S. Suffolk sheep to other countries that might consider importing them," he said. "Either way, the U.S. sheep industry should benefit."

Perry County Fair names livestock champions

NEW BLOOMFIELD — Benner sisters Erin and Heather of Millerstown swept the top awards in market lamb competition at this year's Perry County Fair.

Taking grand champion honors in both the 4-H and Open Market Lamb shows was Erin Benner, who later sold her 143-pound 4-H winner to Farmers Trust Co. of New Bloomfield for $2.20 a pound.

Heather Benner, exhibitor of the reserve champion 4-H entry, sold her lamb to the Agronomy Center, Thompsontown, for $2 per pound.

In the Breeding Sheep show, a Suffolk ewe lamb shown by Kim Hench of Loysville took top honors in both the 4-H and Open shows. Reserve Open honors went to Miss Hench's father, Dean Hench, and reserve in the 4-H show went to Nathaniel Hench.

In Baby Beef competition, Cal Curtis of Landisburg emerged victorious with his 1,170 pound steer. At sale time, the show's top beef went to Henry's Meat Market of Duncannon for 91 cents a pound.

Reserve beef honors went to Jonathan Stoltzfus of Loysville, who later sold his 1,122-pound entry to Ron Bolze of Loysville for 84 cents a pound.

A yearling Limousin heifer shown by Jeff Stoltzfus was named champion in the Beef Breeding show. His father, Joe Stoltzfus, took reserve honors.

The sister-brother team of Dawn and Carl Curtis, Landisburg, dominated 4-H Market Swine competition, taking grand champion and reserve honors, respectively. Dawn's 244-pound 4-H champion went to Hatfield for $3.50 a pound, and Country Butcher Shop of Carlisle took home Carl's reserve champion for $2.20 a pound.

The FFA Market Hog show saw Tim Weigel, Millerstown, come out on top, with Roy Kanagy of Newport taking reserve. Weigel's 235-pound champion went to Juniata Concrete for $2.20 a pound, and the reserve champion sold to Dale McGuire Insurance for $1.75.

The Premier Exhibitor and Premier Breeder Banners were awarded to Rainbow Farms, West Tisbury, Mass.

NAILE to feature more than 13,000 entries

LOUISVILLE, KY — When the North American International Livestock Exposition (NAILE) opens its doors to competitors this year, livestock breeders from across the nation will participate. According to Harold Workman, manager of the North American International, the exposition has become the largest, all-breed, purebred livestock show on earth and is expected to attract more than 13,000 entries this year.

Events in 1985 will span a 14-day period, from November 9 until November 22. Six livestock types will be featured, including beef cattle, quarter horses, dairy cattle, swine, draft horses and sheep. According to manager Workman, virtually every livestock breed will be represented in each of the six livestock categories, bringing total shows and livestock sales during the 2-week run of events to nearly 100.

Jack Ragsdale, chairman of the NAILE'S Executive Committee, has also confirmed that the big exposition will feature an expanded group of activities for both livestock breeders and visitors this year. Ragsdale said the North American will again feature Championship Rodeo Finals which are PRCA sanctioned; a barnyard featuring baby animals; many junior livestock events; a variety of sales, including a draft horse sale; the Agri-Products Show will return this year on an expanded basis to feature everything from livestock trailers to fine jewelry; and a Draft Horse Pull will take place for the second year.

Nominations due for NY Bull Test

ITHACA, NY — Nominations for the 1985-86 New York Bull Test are being accepted until Oct. 4

William Greene, livestock extension associate at Cornell University and director of the Bull Test said nominations will be accepted on a first-come, first-served basis, with the first 100 bulls that meet eligibility requirements being accepted for the performance testing program. He added, at least 10 per cent of the test program will be reserved for out of state breeders.

"There have been revisions regarding eligibility, health requirements, data collection and certification requirements for the 1985-86 test," Greene said urging interested producers to write his office at 130 Morrison Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y. 14853 for full information.

The primary purpose of this annual testing program is to evaluate bulls under uniform, unbiased conditions and then to make these bulls available to beef cattle producers at the annual Bull Test Sale. The 1986 Bull Test Sale will be May 2 at Ithaca.

Champion FFA hog is nickel short of York Fair record

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORK — A Dover FFA member fattened his bank account by $750 as his champion market hog brought a near-record price at the York Fair's annual FFA hog sale.

Chris Moul, member of the Dover FFA chapter, was first in the sales ring with his 250-pound Yorkshire-Duroc crossbred. After a spirited round of bidding, the champion was knocked down to Hatfield Packing Company for $3 per pound.

Top York Fair price was set in 1983, when the champion brought $3.05. But the reserve hog, exhibited by Keith Harbold, did break the former $2.05 record for the runner-up spot. Hatfield Packing also bought the second place winner, paying $2.40 for the 246-pound Yorkshire-Landrace crossbred. Moul is a member of the Gifford-Pinchot FFA chapter.

A total of 47 market hogs were sold at the York Fair auction, for an average price per pound, with the champion and reserve prices, of 71 cents. Average price minus the top two hogs was 61 cents per pound.

Graystone wins in Ontario

SCHELLSBURG – Graystone Farm of Schellsburg was the owner of a number of champion Polled Herefords at the 125th Anniversary International Polled Hereford Show in Toronto, Ont.

The show marked the 125th year that Hereford cattle have been raised in Canada, and was designated as a Standard of Perfection Show by the American Polled Hereford Association. The 258-head competition was held in late August and was judged by Dr. Harlan Ritchie of Michigan State University, East Lansing, and Ken Cox, Camrose, Alta.

Graystone led out three of the six divisional winners in the bull show. Their reserve senior champion was Magador Sculptor 46R, a 2-year-old son of national champion Graystone Granite. Two years ago this bull was named the junior calf champion at the 61st National Polled Hereford Show in Louisville, Ky.

A January 1985 son of Magador Sculptor was selected as the champion bull calf in the show. Graystone named this calf Graystone Architect 615T.

Graystone Frontline 537S nailed down the reserve junior champion bull title for the farm. This Graystone entry is a March '84 bull sired by PRL 930K Hotline 347N.

Inoculants cut pH of alfalfa silage

MILWAUKEE, WI – Silage inoculants can reduce the pH in first-cut alfalfa silage to proper levels at a faster rate than untreated silage, according to a recent study at the University of Guelph, Ont.

Researchers tested several different inoculant products on alfalfa and corn silages during a two-year study. Alfalfa silages were treated with one of the additives and ensiled in either mason jar or pail silos. Untreated samples were ensiled for controls. The silos were opened periodically for sample testing.

"Of the inoculants tested, the product from Chr. Hansen's Laboratory (Biomate) was consistently the most effective," reports Bryan D. McKersie, a researcher from the University of Guelph who conducted the study

Biomate, containing Lactobacillus plantarum and Pediococcus cervisiae, reduced alfalfa silage to a pH of 4.95 by the fourth day of the test, while untreated silage registered 5.53. For proper fermentation to occur, a pH level below 5.0 is needed, McKersie says.

By the 28th day, Biomate-treated silage had reached a pH of 4.78 compared to the control at 5.01. The pH of the other inoculant-treated samples ranged from 4.96 for Silabac 1177 to 5.0 for Silomate.

More research is being conducted on the effect of bacterial inoculants on pH levels, as well as how management conditions such as moisture level and type of crop planted influence these levels.

The study shows that brands of silage inoculants vary greatly. Reading the label won't help to distinguish one brand from another, McKersie says, and a farmer can't tell how well the inoculant works just by looking at the silage. He recommends chosing a product tested by a credible laboratory or university.

"If you decide to use an inoculant for alfalfa silage, select an inoculant from a reputable company--not one made in someone's garage," he concludes.

Syntex sells two businesses

DES MOINES, IA – Syntex Agribusiness, Inc, announced today that it has completed divestiture of the biologicals segment of its business in the United States

A line of verterinary vaccine products, as well as a research farm and a production facility in Des Moines, have been purchased by Agrion, Inc. of Oakland, California, as previously announced. In addition, Syntex's recently developed vaccine for feline leukemia has been purchased by Solvay Company of Brussels, Belgium. Transaction prices were not disclosed

"The sale of our U S. biologicals business enables us to concentrate our resources and expertise in the development and marketing of animal pharmaceutical products," said Dr. Robert Kirkpatrick, president of Syntex Agribusiness, Inc.

"We have already begun to undertake an aggressive program to strengthen and expand our role in the animal health industry through internal growth and product acquisitions, he said.

Outside the United States, in a separate transaction, Syntex Agribusiness recently sold its Belgian production facility to SmithKline Animal Health Products, the animal health company of SmithKline Beckman Corporation of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Norman H. Blanchard, President, SmithKline Animal Health Products, commented. "This acquisition is an important step in fulfilling our long-term strategic objectives for expansion of our veterinary ethical products business in Europe."

Syntex will continue to market both biological and pharmaceutical animal health products in European headquarters in Louvain-la-Neuve.

Skid-Steer loaders used for round bale handling

NEW HOLLAND – Round bale handling is just one of the many jobs farmers are handling with skid-steer loaders. It's a natural, says John Bentley of Sperry New Holland.

New Holland, he notes, would prefer that farmers use a fork with a grapple to hold the bales securely. But farmers are designing their own forks and spikes for use without a grapple to put bales into plastic bags or tubes for round bale silage. It seems to work well.

Generally, round bales are well within the safe load rating of skid-steer loaders, Bentley adds. But he cautions that the combination of little loaders and the largest bales won't work. The larger bales will be too heavy for safe handling by the small loaders. Just don't do it, he cautions.

Where the bales are within the loader's safe operating range, you can move around a lot easier with a skid-steer loader than with a tractor front end loader, says Bentley who is a product manager for loaders at Sperry New Holland

Hydrostatic drive and all-wheel traction make the difference as on any other job. It's just easier to maneuver through gates to get to bale feeders. And the operator is inside the loader safety frame. With seat belt fastened, he's better protected from accident than if he were on an ordinary tractor with front loader.

Here the job is cornstalks for bedding. The skid-steer loader picks the bales and slings them up to the spreader. With the twine removed, the spreader will process the bales for bedding right in the feed yard. Teasing the stalks out in a loose layer increases their effectiveness as bedding.

Aal new Steiger president

FARGO, N.D – Steiger Tractor, Inc. has announced that Irvin E. Aal, 46, former group president of International Harvester, has joined the company as president and chief executive officer. Aal is a Minnesota native with 23 years of experience in the farm equipment industry.

"Irv Aal is highly respected in our industry," said Eugene Dahl, Steiger's chairman. "He brings us a broad and varied background in the farm equipment business at a critical time in our industry."

Until February 1985, Aal was president of International Harvester's Agricultural Equipment Group, headquartered in Chicago, Ill. J.I. Case acquired International Harvester's Agricultural Equipment Group in February 1985.

Before joining International Harvester in 1983, Aal was vice president and general manager, North America, for Sperry New Holland. Aal joined that major farm equipment manufacturer in 1962 and held a variety of sales and marketing positions.

In accepting his position, Aal said, "These are tough times for the farm equipment industry. However, I'm convinced that Steiger has the staying power to survive the downturn and emerge an even stronger company. My goals will be to maintain Steiger's financial strength and product quality edge, and to position the company to compete profitably in a restructured marketplace. I'm impressed with the accomplishments of the members of the current management team, and I'm looking forward to working with them."

Irvin E. Aal

Aal replaces David Koentopf as Steiger's president and chief executive officer Koentopf resigned in June to take a position with a Minneapolis firm. Dallas Lien, vice president of engineering, has been acting chief executive officer in the interim.

Seedway hosts dealers from Northeast

QUEENSTOWN, MD – Seedway Dealers from six northeastern states gathered here recently for a field day with Asgrow-O's Gold Researchers.

Over fifty dealers heard Dr. John Schillinger, Director of Worldwide Agronomic Research, discuss the commitment the company is making in the eastern United States to develop corn and soybean varieties for eastern farmers. Seedway, Inc. markets Asgrow-O's Gold products in the region.

New corn varieties for 1985-86 were shown by Dr. Jerry Arnold, Association Director Field Corn Research.

RX892 and RX788 join the Asgrow-O's Gold product line with excellent agronomic characteristics and eastern adaptability. Their yield advantage over current commercial varieties will become apparent as farmers begin to use them, the company says.

Dr. Schillinger leads the research team which has elevated Asgrow Soybeans to a position of world leadership in the private soybean sector.

He announced the release of five new varieties for the Mid-Atlantic soybean growing area, highlighting A3307, an early Group III which carries genetic resistance to soybean cyst nematode races 3 and 4.

Dr. Jerry Arnold and Dr. John D. Schillinger compare notes on newly released Asgrow-O's Gold Variety RX892, which they described to growers at a field day in Queenstown, MD.

Allied seeks to buy White

CHICAGO, IL – Allied Products Corporation and White Farm Equipment Company announced today that an agreement has been reached wherein Allied Products will purchase essentially all of the operating assets of White Farm Equipment Company.

White Farm Equipment, a major manufacturer of agricultural equipment, headquartered in Oak Brook, Illinois, is currently operating under the protection of the bankruptcy court, and the proposed acquisition is subject to approval by the court.

Richard A. Drexler, Allied's president, stated that the proposed acquisition of White Farm Equipment would represent Allied's third acquisition of a farm equipment manufacturer within two years. In 1983, Allied acquired the Kewanee Farm Equipment Company and, in 1984, it acquired New Idea Farm Equipment, both of which are currently achieving good results. Allied's historical involvement in agricultural equipment has been through its Bush Hog Implement and Continental Gin Divisions.

Mr. Drexler observed that, "White has a record of quality and innovative products dating back to the first tractor and the Oliver plow. The fact that White has been able to maintain annual sales in excess of $100 million in recent years, despite the depressed farm economy and its own precarious financial condition, is testimony to the loyalty of its dealers and farm customers. We look upon White as a significant opportunity and we intend to operate it as a going concern."

Allied Products also announced that in view of the proposed transaction with White, it was withdrawing a previously filed registration statement for an offering of its common stock.

David Zimmerman of New Holland, accepted the award for Area Six as the top Atlantic area. The award represents the total performance of an entire area. Zimmerman's Area Six includes all of Lancaster County, the majority of York and Adams counties and the northern portion of several Maryland counties. The Technician force in this area consists of 11 unit technicians and four coordinators.

Titus Smith of Martinsburg, Blair County received recognition for his accomplishments in the area of direct-herd sales and service. Smith represents Atlantic in southcentral Pennsylvania.

New John Deere 710 Mulch Tiller may be operated with tractors having as little as 60 PTO h.p., bringing the benefits of conservation tillage to smaller farming operations.

Deere unveils 710 Mulch Tiller

MOLINE, IL — The benefits of conservation tillage become available to small scale farming operations with the introduction of the John Deere 710 Mulch Tiller. The 710 can be operated with tractors of 60 to 120 horsepower, in contrast to previous conservation tillage equipment which requires substantially larger tractors.

Like the John Deere 712 Mulch Tiller introduced some years ago, the 710 consists of a row of disk or coulter blades followed by chisel plow shanks. It may be equipped with 20 inch spherical disk blades or 20 inch coulter blades. Disks provide maximum incorporation of residue. Coulters should be selected for use in heavy residue which requires maximum cutting and slicing action.

The chisel plow shanks are arranged in two ranks. They may be equipped with three-inch (standard) or four-inch (optional) shovels to stir the soil and incorporate some of the residue. Both coulters and chisel plows are mounted on spring-loaded frames to permit operation in rocky soil conditions.

New John Deere 710 Mulch Tillers are available in 6 ft. 3 in. or 8 ft. 9 inch widths, the smaller width for use with 60 to 80 h.p. tractors and the wider model for use with 80 to 120 h.p. tractors.

New Holland drops loan rate

NEW HOLLAND — In its latest effort to help farmers and ranchers lower their production equipment costs, Sperry New Holland, largest of North American specialized farm equipment makers, has drastically reduced its annual percentage rate on 24-month retail financed purchases of new haying and forage equipment, manure spreaders, and grinder-mixers during a 4-month period from September 1 through December 31, 1985–from 7.90% to 0.0%.

Thirty-six and 48-month contract APR's during the limited-time offer period remain at 8.9 and 10.9% respectively.

Other buying options available to farmers and ranchers through participating Sperry New Holland dealers during the September-December period include a cash rebate on the same lines of new equipment ranging from $100 to $7,400, depending on type of equipment, model and purchase date.

Ritchie develops

Challenger livestock fountain

CONRAD, IA – The new, 1986, Challenger™ Livestock Fountain from Ritchie Industries, Inc. redefines both energy efficiency and watering equipment durability, according to George Stoneback, advertising manager, Ritchie Livestock Fountains.

"In-house research shows it's about 80 percent more energy efficient than similar Ritchie models with conventional water troughs instead of water wells," says Stoneback. "Each of two deep water wells dips into a 10-plus gallon trough of warmed water."

A floating Thermal Cap physically blocks most contact between warmed water and colder outside air. A gentle 6-ounces of pressure moves the cover for cattle to drink. If necessary, the Thermal Cap can be easily lifted out.

Some 2¼-inches of insulation in the casing and on the Thermal Cap help insure against freeze ups and dramatically reduce heating costs. A small amount of electricity used in the water wells further protects against freeze ups.

The Challenger is heated with two 80-watt immersion heaters and one 36-watt supply line cable heater. These heaters can be turned off except during extreme, continued winter weather.

"Thanks to careful design consideration, the Challenger is priced lower in cost than most 'energy-free' watering equipment," says Peterson.

The Challenger's all stainless steel construction guarantees long-life in spite of livestock abuse. Stainless steel virtually doesn't rust or corrode in the presence of water, mud, manure and acids typically found around livestock operations. Corners are protected from on-going rubbing of livestock with durable 8-inch protectors.

Waterflow capacity is about 15 gallons per minute. A glowing red indicator identifies times when heat is on and accommodates proper thermostate adjustment. The fountain itself is 36¾-inches long, 20-inches wide and 23-inches tall. It waters 40 or more head of cattle.

The Challenger can easily replace existing cattle fountains, according to Peterson. "It is easy for Ritchie dealers to make this exchange because it doesn't require any special water supply tile," he says.

Second-generation axial-flow combines unveiled by Case

RACINE, WI — This fall Case International will begin rolling out a second generation of Axial-Flow combines, a revolutionary rotary design fist introduced in 1977. The new 1600 Series machines offer higher horsepower, increased elevator capacity, a new feeder and header reverser, and numerous other features designed to enhance productivity and operator convenience.

A new 1000 Series of grain headers and corn heads will also be launched. A totally new design, these headers provide increased capacity and cutting speeds to match the larger combines.

The 1600 Series includes four self-propelled units: Models 1620, 1640, 1660 and 1680. The 1620, 1660 and 1680 are also available in rice models. The 1600 series is complemented by the current production pull-type Model 1482 and the hillside Model 1470. The competitively priced Axial-Flow combines deliver high efficiency and productivity.

Increased engine horsepower, larger grain elevators and increased concave area on the Models 1640, 1660 and 1680 enhance productivity and capacity.

Model	Horsepower	Grain Tank Capacity (bushels)
1620	124	125
1640	150	145
1680	225	208

All models feature an increased cage separating area resulting in less sensitivity to changing crops or conditions.

Increased grain elevator capacity enhances productivity, especially in high yielding, high moisture crops such as early corn, green maize and rice. A new grain tank delivery system on 1660 rice and all 1680 models increases machine capacity and improves grain flow.

A new specialty rotor for rice and edible beans, available on all models, provides more uniform material flow, more complete threshing and increased capacity. The rotor can also be used in crops which are compatable with rice and edible beans.

Increased Operator Convenience

The 1600 Series combines feature a new electric feeder and header reverser. When used in conjunction with the new auger lift reel on the 1000 Series headers, the reverser allows most feeder/header plugging to be cleared from the operator's seat. When the reel is raised to its maximum height, the auger automatically begins to rise, increasing the clearance. The operator can then activate the reverser mechanism and clear slugs in the feeder or header. Hydraulic reel fore-and-aft control allows on-the-go reel adjustment.

Improved brakes reduce pedal effort 25 to 40 percent from earlier models. An upgraded cab features a repositioned air inlet filter, new large convex rectangular mirrors and a new unloader swing system for improved unloading visibility. New shaft speed and grain scan monitors enhance operator convenience.

New mechanical suspension seats, with fore-and-aft, vertical and seat-tilt adjustments, are standard. An optional air suspension seat is available.

A backlighted right-hand console and headliner and six rectangular halogen lights including a flood lamp provide better visibility for night operation.

Axial-Flow Advantages

In comparison to conventional cylinder and straw walker systems, the Axial-Flow combine provides greater grain retention, less grain damage, faster harvesting and easier servicing. The multiple threshing and separating action of the Axial-Flow, combined with centrifugal force, recovers a higher percentage of grain and eliminates straw walkers. Multiple passes over the threshing area provide more gentle threshing action with less crop damage.

Large rotors keep grain flowing quickly through the cage. Hydrostatic drive allows the operator to accurately select maximum operating speeds for all field and crop conditions. The streamlined design of the Axial-Flow combines means fewer parts to service, thus reducing downtime. Components are easily accessible to minimize daily service time.

1000 Series Grain Headers

The new grain header line includes the Model 1010 rigid headers, Model 1015 windrow pickup headers and Model 1020 flexible cutterbar headers.

The entire line features a new, larger 23.6-inch (600mm) diameter floating auger that substantially increases header capacity. A new auger lift reel allows auger unplugging from the operator's seat. The manual fore-and-aft reel adjustment has been simplified using a crank mechanism. An optional hydraulic reel mechanism allows on-the-go reel adjustment.

A new, stronger 1.5-inch knife system improves cutting and reduces header losses, especially in soybeans and rice.

The flexible header Model 1020 features a new cutterbar height sensing system, lightweight flotation mechanism and simplified adjustments. The Case International line now includes the industry's largest flexible header. Six sizes offered ranging up to 30 feet in length.

Specially designed for use in windrows, the new 1015 pickup headers provide improved material flow from pickup to auger. A wider 154-inch pickup improves overall performance, especially in double swathed windrows.

For self-propelled combines, six sizes of rigid headers up to 30 feet in length and two sizes of pickup headers, 11 and 13 feet in length, are available.

1000 Series Corn Heads

The durable, lightweight design of the 1000 Series corn heads provides high quality, fuel efficient performance. Low-profile gathering units work close to the ground, for maximum effectiveness when stalks are down or tangled.

Deeper ear pockets and a slow speed auger that prevents kick-out are among the yield-saving features of the corn heads. A tall corn attachment is now standard equipment.

Attaching and detaching the corn heads has been made easier with the new quick connect header shaft drive.

The 1000 Series corn head line consists of seven sizes ranging from 4-row narrow to 8-row wide.

Fall fertilizing can aid soil

ATLANTA, GA – Harvesting of crops ranks as the first order of business this fall for most farmers across the countryside. Buy many growers will also begin working for future profit opportunities.

Soil testing, fall fertilization, and related management practices can help farmers achieve maximum economic yields. Here are some timely suggestions from agronomists of the Potash & Phosphate Insitute (PPI).

Early fall provides an ideal time for soil fertility planning. Fall soil testing can show what toll the year's crop is taking from the soil. Testing labs usually have the capability to turn out results more quickly in the fall than in spring.

Soil tests should be used to monitor the fertilizer program. The soil-crop system is dynamic and under constant change, and guessing cannot evaluate the situation. Reliable soil test data – along with known crop needs, the farmer's management skills and prevailing economic conditions – help build knowledge for a sound fertilizer program.

Phosphorus (P) and potassium (K) can be safely and efficiently applied on many soils during the fall or winter. Level and gently rolling fields with good residue cover generally provide good surface conditions. In effect, P and K can be stored in the soil, minimizing delays and compaction associated with spring application. Spring seeded row crops – including corn, soybeans, and cotton – use fall-applied fertilizer efficiently.

The agronomists don't advise K application on deep sandy soils because of risk of leaching. And they don't advise surface application on steep slopes – over 8%.

Fall fertilization is often compatible with conservation tillage systems, the agronomists note. P and K are vital for rapid seedling growth on cool, moist, conservation-tilled soil with surface residue. Building soil fertility to higher test levels provides more productive conditions.

Where double cropping is a standard practice, fall fertilization can help supply the needs of both crops. Combinations such as wheat followed by soybeans or wheat followed by grain sorghum remove high amounts of nutrients from the soil.

Alfalfa responds to fall P and K application with increased yields and longevity of stands. Top-dressing in fall allows these nutrients to winterize the crop and be ready to stimulate early growth. Alfalfa removes large amounts of potassium, as well as phosphorus, calcium, magnesium and sulfur.

Pastures also get a boost from fall applications of P and K For best success of new winter pastures, both overseeded and on prepared seedbeds, P and K should be applied either preplant or at planting.

In some areas, nitrogen (N), as well as P, K and lime, can be fall-applied for wheat.

Apply nitrogen in the ammonium form after soils cool down below 50 degrees (F). Local conditions may also show economic advantage for nitrogen stabilizers

Business still booming for Brockways

Even though they've been out of production for eight years now, there is still a booming business for Brockway truck parts, as Joe Thomas of J. Thomas, Ltd. in Lancaster, has discovered. Thomas, a former Brockway employee, took over the parts operation four years ago, when the Mack Truck Co., which owned Brockway, closed down its Brockway parts service. Thomas' facility, located in the Hempfield Industrial Park, has more than 8,000 Brockway parts in stock.

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett
Farm Management Agent
Lewistown Extension Office

Watch out for 'gimmicks'

Gimmick Farming

P.T. Barnum of the Barnum and Bailey Circus once said "there is a sucker born every minute and two people born to take advantage of him". There is a lot of truth to that statement.

In the 25 years plus that I have been in extension in Pennsylvania, I have seen hundreds of "sucker" schemes designed to separate the gullible from their hard-earned buck.

There have been the Texas Sand save all material, eye dropper fertilizer where a drop will perform miracles, magic potions spread on fields in the dark of the moon to eliminate weevils, and materials so miraculous they could serve any purpose from providing plant nutrients to killing bugs to correcting herd health problems.

There have been new companies and new buying groups that "guarantee" fabulous returns on your invested dollar. There are products that if you invest in them to grow, produce, or handle them, you will be assured that you can retire a millionaire within 10 years (5 if you want to hustle).

There is one thing in common with all of these items – none of the guarantees and none of the leading statements ever is in writing with the signature of a responsible person. They remind me of the used car salesman a few years ago who was extolling the many vitures of the car he wanted to sell me.

He bubbled on and on – finally as a clinching point he exclaimed "why you won't need to repair or replace parts including tires on this car for at least 3 years". I asked him if he would put that in writing.

His answer was sput! sput! of course not! What do you think I am stupid? I asked him why he made such a statement if he wasn't willing to back it up. His answer was that his job was to sell cars.

Is It Legit?

The above discussion on gimmick farming does not mean that every product that comes along is bad or a gimmick or a gyp. Let's look at a possible test to determine "how legit is this deal".

1. Is there a written guarantee – if so what does it guarantee?
2. Will the salesperson be there if something goes wrong?
3. Does the company have an actual office or place of business or is the address a drop box or a post office box?
4. Has the product been tested under Scientific conditions – that means an independent testing institution? The most legitimate type being a University such as Penn State. In house testing is required to initially try a product or a concept, but it is difficult to call that type of test unbiased. Could you be as critical of a product upon which your livelihood relied as someone else.
5. Does the product have the endorsement of someone you know and respect?
6. Did an independent person lay out the demonstration plot or trial?

Perhaps some of the above questions are not appropriate to the product, item, or concept being sold. However if the answers to those questions are evasive or defensive, it is "buyer beware". One of the common evasive answers to the question on testing is "there is no sense in having a University test it because they're all in the pockets of the big boys".

Another answer I have heard is "that costs too much money". A third answer is "we had it tested but they did not know how to run the test properly". All three plus many more evasion answers add up to "naturally not – what do you think we are – stupid?".

If you have any question on the value of a product that has been offered why don't you call the county agent's office and ask if he or she can get any research results. If they do not have anything on hand, the answer is usually only a phone call away.

TAX ALERT

The report for those of you with Keogh plans (5500-C) were due July 31, 1985 for the 1984 tax year. That was postponed to September 30, 1985. If you have not yet filed the report remember that there is a $25 per day penalty after September 30. As I suggested before – if you have an inactive account roll it over into your IRA to eliminate reports after tax year 1986.

Beiner attends NCGA leadership workshop

GREENSBORO, N.C. – Daryl Beiner of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association recently attended a three-day Leadership Development Program for representatives of state corn growers' associations. The program was directed by the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) and supported by the Agricultural Division of Ciba-Geigy Corp.

The meeting was the first part of a two-phase training program. The second session will be held in Washington, D.C., in January.

Beiner, of Mifflinburg, Pa., says he looks forward to taking the skills learned at the workshop and applying them to his role as a corn grower leader. "We need to educate the public and we have a responsibility to be leaders. I look forward to working with the media in telling our story."

Phil Koch, director of communications for Ciba-Geigy, says the company has initially committed to support the Leadership Development Program for three years. "Growers historically have had limited access to professional training in communication, leadership and organizational skills. This program will help build and strengthen these skills."

Koch says that the NCGA represents the nation's largest cash crop and important customers of Ciba-Geigy. "In meeting with the NCGA, it was determined that their need for strong, effective leadership in the future was consistent with our mission to develop and support program for growers through their commodity organizations."

Scott Shearer, NCGA executive director, says the three-year program is the first effort by the NCGA to develop future leaders. "This is a great opportunity for these state representatives to sharpen their skills in public speaking, organizing membership on the local, county and state levels, and working with the media."

Shearer says the goals of the program are to increase enthusiasm by the NCGA participants and carry that enthusiasm to the state and national corn grower boards, to share the information learned with local officers and members, and to help build membership and support for the NCGA. "This program will greatly increase the effectiveness of the organization."

The January session in Washington, D.C., will focus on government structure and effective lobbying on the national level. Participants also will be updated on farm legislation and other agribusiness issues, visit representatives on Capitol Hill, and learn how to improve their political effectiveness at the grassroots level.

Daryl Beiner of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association, of Mifflinburg, Pa., participates in a media training workshop as part of a recent three-day Leadership Development Program for state leaders of corn growers' associations in Greensboro, N.C. The program was directed by the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) and supported by the Agricultural Division of Ciba-Geigy Corporation.

Experimental use approved for new Velsicol herbicide

CHICAGO, IL – Velsicol Chemical Corporation has received an Experimental Use Permit (E.U.P.) for Endurance 65WDG Herbicide, a compound which promises season-long control of a broad spectrum of grasses and broadleaf weeds in vineyards and orchards.

Under the terms of the new E.U.P., Endurance Herbicide will enter the final evaluation stages on tree, nut and vine crops this fall. The permit, granted by both the US Environmental Protection Agency and the California Department of Food and Agriculture, includes non-bearing trees, nuts and vines and is in effect from September 1, 1985 through September 1, 1986. Pending the results of the E.U.P., Velsicol expects full registration for non-bearing crops in 1986-1987 with bearing crops to follow.

Dr. Jack Best, Director of Product Development for Velsicol, adds that early field tests conducted by Steve Bowe, Velsicol's Product Development Representative in California, and evaluations made by cooperating independent researchers indicate that Endurance controls a wider spectrum of grassy weeds and broadleaves than products in current use.

"The early tests also show that Endurance may provide significantly longer residual control than existing products," Dr. Best says. "We fully expect that the E.U.P. will provide enough in-field data to confirm our previous findings that a fall application of Endurance will provide superior weed control well into the following summer. The independent researchers we have worked with over the past seasons are also optimistic about the herbicide's potential."

Endurance provides exceptional crop safety, a characteristic which is essential to effective use in high-valued crops, according to Dr. Best.

Velsicol will place major emphasis on evaluating the new herbicide in non-bearing grapes, almonds, stone fruits, apples, pears and walnuts in 1985 and 1986. Endurance will also be evaluated in non-bearing cherries, citrus, pecans, plums, and prunes.

According to Dr. Best, Endurance will be made available to selected university researchers and producers during the E.U.P. period.

Endurance herbicide is the first of several new compounds being developed by Velsicol to reach the E.U.P. stage. New plant growth regulators, fungicides, herbicides and rodenticides are also being evaluated by the Chicago-based manufacturer which specializes in agricultural and professional pest control markets.

Alfalfa weevil attacks plants under stress

BY JIM MARTINDALE
North Country
Ag-Gro Consulting

CARTHAGE, N.Y. — By now virtually everyone has observed the appetite of the alfalfa weevil for 1985. The extent of the losses probably won't be fully known until the forage is fed and the analysis comes back to confirm the devastation these pests cause.

Scouting fields reveals patterns of feeding which correlate with several cultural practices in alfalfa production. The first pattern which everyone recognizes is that alfalfa weevils first attack alfalfa which is under the most severe stress within a given field. Scouting nearly always yields the largest larvae counts where soils are highest and driest. These plants typically suffer greater drought stress than plants in lower areas. Alfalfa plants, which evaporate 858 lbs. of water per lb of dry matter produced in above ground foliage, can encounter drought stress quite easily.

Other patterns began to emerge as scouting proceeded. In the Lewis and Jefferson County areas, there are widely differing recommendations and practices concerning the treatment of soils for potash, boron and copper deficiencies. Experience has shown trace mineral levels to be sufficiently low to require additions of up to eight pounds per year of boron and copper for alfalfa. Soils treated at these rates become significantly altered from the average in only a few seasons.

Fields with higher levels of boron and copper began to experience weevil feeding as did most other fields. However, in as little as one week after 20-25 larvae were found per 5 sweeps, feeding declined to near zero. Then, 14 days later after the initial scouting, no feeding was observed. The previous injury was then apparent, now several inches below the top growth of the plants.

The impact of nutritional stress is also influenced by the ability of the plant to access nutrients in the soil. A vivid example of how this occurs in soil was illustrated by a seemingly innocent set of wheeltracks made by a tractor over 1 year ago in a neighboring alfalfa field. The farmer had inadvertently driven into an alfalfa field with his manure spreader In order to minimize his dilemma, he drove diagonally across the he drove diagonally across the field down the slope toward the edge of the field to exit onto the main highway.

This year those wheel tracks stood out, because of the high feeding rate of the alfalfa weevil. Those plants were under stress. Since only the wheel-tracks were attacked, we could conclude that the compaction had introduced the stress. Since feeding continued down the slope it seems logical that moisture was not the stress factor. The stress which these plants were under was the absence of a feeder root system. It could not develop adequately during 1984 because the soil around the top six to eight inches of the plants was too tightly compacted with the wheeltrack.

That seemingly isolated and small incident helps explain why farmers who have been using the soil aerator and high level fertility practices experienced consistently less weevil pressure in their alfalfa stands this year.

Most Kubotas to have ROPS

LOS ANGELES, CA – Each year, some 50,000 disabling injuries occur on the farm, and about 500 of those result in death, according to the National Safety Council Farm Department. Since tractors are involved in many preventable injuries and deaths, Kubota Tractor Corp. has instituted a mandatory rollover protective structure (ROPS) and seat belt program for almost all of its new tractors.

Kubota will ship all tractor models with ROPS and seat belts or ROPS cab and seat belts with the exception of all G-Series lawn and garden tractors and special low-profile orchard model tractors to be used in an orchard.

"ROPS with seat betls have proven to be extremely effective in saving lives and reducing the seriousness of injuries in overturns," said S. Egusa, president of Kubota. "They have been standard equipment on all appropriate tractors in our line for a number of years."

The overturn is the most common tractor accident. ROPS normally limit the overturn to 90 degrees, while at the same time providing a zone of safety for the operator. Seat belts are an integral part of ROPS and must always be worn in conjunction with ROPS.

In a related safety effort, Kubota is developing a sales program through which dealers can install ROPS and seat belts on previously-sold tractors, for which safety devices have been designed. Kubota ROPS come in either two- or four-post structures, attached to the tractor frame, or as integral parts of a cab.

Doebler's hosts tours of new sizing plant

BY BARBARA MILLER
Staff Correspondent

JERSEY SHORE – "Some people find the equipment interesting, and some prefer the field tour," said Bill Camerer, vice president of Doebler's Pennsylvania Hybrids, Inc., of Jersey Shore.

Camerer, also head of research, and other qualified personnel assisted 200 visitors on a tour of Doebler facilities and seed corn fields last Saturday.

Herbert Myers of Lancaster County was one of those who enjoyed viewing the equipment. The dryer and new sizing plant, he said, were particularly interesting.

The logistics of Doebler's number one dryer were impressive. Tour guide, Gary Bowers, gave people an idea of the amount of gas consumed during the drying operation. Despite assurances from the natural gas company that they could supply ample gas to the dryer, when it went on line, the Jersey Shore steel mill was forced to close because there was not enough gas. Since, Bowers said, an LP gas truck arrives almost daily during the drying season to fill their tanks.

According to Bowers, the dryer, a barn-sized cinder block affair, holds 40,000 bushels of ears each time it is filled. Bins on either side of the building are equipped with doors that may be opened to admit a portion of the 300,000 cubic feet of air per minute pumped by two 66 inch, 75 hp fans.

Two four-and-one-half- foot-diameter gas burners, which project five-inch blue flames, are capable of providing heat at the rate of 29 million BTUs per hour. At maximum capacity the burners gobble 250 gallons of LP gas or comparable natural gas each hour.

Additionally, Bowers said, the technician who installed the powerful fans instructed the operators to always let half the bin doors open. He advised this, he said, because the fans possessed the capacity to blow the building apart.

After a week in the drying barn the corn is taken to the shelling facility where it is carefully screened for impurities such as molded or sprouted corn. Next it is transported to the new sizing plant.

Bill Camerer designed the sizing plant which includes an 80-foot tower. Camerer said the purpose of the operation there is to remove any remaining foreign matter, sort the corn grains into various sizes, and then treat, bag, and label the shelled corn.

The new sizing plant, according to Camerer, processes 300 bushels of corn per hour and sacks the treats 10 bushels per minute. This is a substantial increase from the old sizing plant that sized 100 bushels of corn per hour and sacked and treated four bushels of corn per minute. The new facility has the potential to handle 120,000 bushels of corn per season which is more than double the capacity of the old one which processed 50,000 bushels per year.

The 80-foot tower is necessary, Camerer explained, so the corn doesn't have to be re-elevated. To separate the corn into rounds, flats, longs, and shorts, it goes through a minimum of seven or eight machines.

Farmers pick Red Wing

REDWING, MN – In a recently released survey of Successful Farming's subscribers, more farmers selected Red Wing Business Systems as the leading producer of software programs used in the farm business.

The survey, which was released at the August meeting of the Association of Agricultural Computing Companies, showed Red Wing as the leading brand with 11.6%, Lotus and Visicalc with 8.4%, IBM with 7.4%, and the rest of the companies with lesser scores.

Surveys were sent to 1136 subscribers, of which 968 responded for a total response rate of 85%. The panel of farmers surveyed included both farmers with and without computers, with varying types of operations and located throughout most of the country.

Another survey conducted by the Alberta Department of Agriculture shows that Red Wing software is in fourth place (ranked by use) in Western Canada. This survey was sent to approximately 684 Compu-Farm subscribers (with various operations throughout Western Canada), with 355 responding for a 52% response rate.

According to Lyle Warrington, President, Red Wing Business Systems "These surveys show for the first time, one company has taken a leadership position among the hundreds of companies producing software for agriculture."

Red Wing Business Systems is the nation's leading producer of computer software for the financial and production management needs of agriculture. The software is available through better computer dealers nationwide.

Woodland, wildlife workshop slated in Dauphin Co.

HARRISBURG It's the opening day of small game season, you and your daughter are walking the same fields you hunted as a boy The morning started with memories and stories of hunts past when you flushed a dozen ringnecks and twice that many cottontails.

By early afternoon you flushed three hens and a lone sprinter ringneck that avoided you by running into the next county. Later your daughter looks at you and asks, "Dad, are you sure in the old days you found flocks of pheasants?"

You just received an offer on your front porch from an eager firewood cutter interested in obtaining permission to cut firewood on your 20-acre woodlot. Before you answer, you find a dozen questions in your mind What's a fair price to sell my trees as fuelwood? Can I get more by selling them for sawtimber? What trees should be cut? What am I liable for if he had an accident cutting wood on my land? Who can answer all these questions?

These questions and scenarios will be addressed during the day-long Woodlot and Wildlife Management Workshop on Sept 28, sponsored by the Dauphin Co Conservation District

If you are a woodlot owner, farmer, hunter, birdwatcher, or any combination of these four groups, wildlife management and forestry are most likely two topics of interest to you. The consulting firm of Wildlife Managers will conduct two classroom sessions in the morning at Camp Hebron In the afternoon use your newly found knowledge to look for examples of multiple use during a Tree Farm Tour

Allan and John Laskowski, owners of the award winning Carsonville Farms, will join service forester Paul Troutman to guide you through this unique living classroom.

Call the Conservation District at 558-1090 for an agenda and registration information

Paired-row wheat offers less erosion, higher yields

PULLMAN, Wash. – An experimental method of planting could greatly reduce erosion and be cheaper than conventional planting, says a U.S. Department of Agriculture scientist.

Preliminary tests show no-till planting of wheat in paired rows controls soil erosion on slopes without scarificing yields, says soil scientist Robert I. Papendick with USDA's Agricultural Research Service in Pullman, Wash.

Papendick says the Pacific Northwest is the ideal place to test the new planting concept. "With no-till planting, erosion in this area can be held to less than two tons per acre per year," he says. "This compares with a possible soil loss of 20 tons per acre or more from land planted by conventional tillage. That's a savings of 90 percent.

"In the past, small grains, such as wheat and barley, have not yielded as well when planted on no-till land as when planted with conventional tillage or plowing," says Papendick. "But by combining the paired-row concept with use of a no-till seed drill, our test plots are yielding as much grain as conventionally tilled plots."

"An experimental seed drill used on our paired-row test plots combines maximum tillage, seeding and fertilizer application in one pass across farmers' fields," says Papendick.

The paired-row concept also gives farmers new options for removing weeds. The 15 inches between rows allows ample space for limited tillage and herbicide treatment, whereas conventional planting allows only 7 inches between rows.

"Paired-row planting also offers possibilities for more efficient fertilizer use," says microbiologist Lloyd F. Elliott with the research agency here.

The drill consists of three pairs of 24-inch-diameter, offset double disks mounted on an 8-foot-long tool bar. The paired seed disks are mounted [illegible] behind and 2-½ inches off to the left and right sides of the fertilizer disks.

"At the time of seeding," says Elliott, "one set of double disks bands fertilizer, such as aqua ammonia, beneath the seed and between the paired rows. The disks simultaneously cover the fertilizer with a layer of soil, which prevents rapid volatilization of the fertilizer."

Ag trade mission attempts to increase South Korean markets

GREENSBORO, NC – Members of four margin United States agricultural commodities associations completed their weeklong Market Development Mission to the Republic of Korea (South Korea) Aug. 31 on an optimistic note, announced trip coordinator Jim Palmer of the Agricultural Division of the Ciba-Geigy Corporation.

Market Development Mission participants were: Maurice Gordon of the U.S. Feed Grains Council, Dain Friend of the National Corn Growers Association, Roger Asendorf of the American Soybean Association, and Billy Bob Brown of the National Grain Sorghum Producers Association. Each representative is also a farmer.

During their visit, the association representatives discussed existing and potential demand for American agricultural products in the peninsula of over 40 million people. This took the shape of meetings with Korean agricultural associations and industry, as well as the American Embassy's Agricultural Counselor and Attache in Seoul.

"We began our first day of meetings with the U.S. Feed Grains Council's Seoul Office, and went on to discuss promoting U.S. grain and soybeans in Korea with the Korean Feed Association and the American Embassy," Palmer said.

Market Development Mission members also held a productive meeting with the Cheil Sugar Co. on Incheon, a major port of entry for many U.S. agricultural products. Samsung, the parent company of Cheil Sugar, employs over 90,000 people in 25 companies worldwide, and uses corn sweeteners and soybeans in many of its products. Ag association representatives also toured the company's feed manufacturing and soybean crushing plant.

Meetings with private industry extended to the Dong Bang Corp., a soymilk processing plant headquartered near Incheon, as well as a tour of the ChunHo poultry breeding and broiler operation in Pocheon.

"We feel there is great potential for sound agricultural trade relations with South Korea for a couple of reasons," Palmer said. "First, the country is the size of the state of Indiana, with a population of 40 million people. This points to a need for other sources of grain and soybeans. Second, statistics indicate there's a declining farm population in South Korea. A generation ago, virtually 100 percent of the people lived on farms; now that figure stands at 25 percent."

Mission participant and American Soybean Association national president Roger Asendorf echoed the sentiment. "Fortunately or unfortunately, America can produce twice as much food as it needs," he says. "This trip has the potential to benefit both Korean and American agriculture." The trip is also a chance to improve trade relations and communicate the importance of agriculture to United States consumers, he added.

Over the last several years, in fact, the United States had an 80 percent-plus market share for feed grains in South Korea, noted Mission member Maurice Gordon, of the U.S. Feed Grains Council. But in fiscal year 1984 that number dropped significantly, due to competition from the People's Republic of China. Korea's imports of Chinese corn surpassed imports of U.S. corn by a nearly three-to-one margin during the first four months of 1985, he added.

"We need to redouble our efforts to develop and maintain markets for U.S. agricultural products abroad, especially in light of this situation," Gordon said. "The Market Development Mission was one step in that direction."

In sponsoring this agricultural trade delegation, Ciba-Geigy hoped to effect a dialogue between the American and Korean farmer, Palmer noted. "We also wanted to clearly demonstrate our support of American farmers and their efforts to develop markets for U.S. grain and soybean products worldwide."

Seedway Sales representative Ray Layser congratulates Stella and Ivan Garrison of Elmer, NJ, after they were honored by Seedway, Inc. at a recent dealers meeting.

USSR to buy more wheat

WASHINGTON – Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block announced the Soviet Union will buy an additional 1.1 million metric tons of wheat, exceeding a record set earlier this year for Soviet grain purchases from the United States.

The wheat purchase brings total Soviet grain purchases to close to 20 million metric tons. The Soviets purchased 14 million metric tons of grain in 1984.

Under the terms of an August 1983 grain sales agreement, the Soviet purchase will meet the four million metric ton minimum for wheat.

Block made the announcement after a week of meetings in Moscow with top USSR agriculture and trade officials.

"This is an important day for American farmers and all the industries and towns which depend on them," Block said.

Control valve cuts watering losses

CONRAD, IA – Water losses from continuous-flow winter feedlot watering systems can be reduced with the new Thrifty-Matic Flo Control valve from Ritchie Industries Inc., according to Jerry Peterson, Ritchie's director of engineering.

This includes the Cattlemaster line of Ritchie fountains which are designed for feedlot use, according to Peterson.

During summer months, and any time the water temperature rises above freezing, a built-in temperature sensor causes the flow control valve to turn off the overflow water.

When temperatures drop below freezing, the sensor lets the flow control valve keep a small amount of water flowing. The temperature sensor measures and responds to water temperature, not outside air temperature. It is adjustable and non-electric.

The Thrifty-Matic Flo Control valve is easy to install. It comes with hose barb and hose to connect to Ritchie Cattlemaster Constant Flow valve outlet, mounting bracket and mounting ring

CCC invites African-aid buys

WASHINGTON – Under Secretary of Agriculture Daniel G. Amstutz said the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) has issued an invitation to private exporters to purchase CCC commodities for resale to drought-stricken African countries.

The invitation is the fifth under a program initiated in May 1984 in which up to $90 million worth of wheat, corn and rice can be sold to eligible countries.

As under the earlier invitations, exporters will acquire the commodities on a competitive bid basis and pay all processing costs plus the cost of transportation to the importing country. Safeguards will be continued to ensure that the commodities will be exported to the eligible countries. Half the quantity of commodities purchased under the program will be shipped on U.S. flag vessels if available at fair and reasonable prices.

The countries designated to participate under the fifth invitation are Angola, Botswana, Burkina Faso, Cape Verde, Chad, Ethiopia, Gambia, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea Bissau, Mali, Mauritania, Mozambique, Niger, Senegal, Somalia and Sudan.

SERIES IV FEED TRANSPORT CART!

Now with convenient hydrostatic drive and extended battery life!

Load it full. Press the new hydrostatic control lever. And you're on your way to feed silage, haylage or any other feed to your dairy herd — quickly, cleanly and conveniently.

With new hydrostatic drive, this new Series IV cart gives you fully variable speed control. Fingertip operation provides any travelling speed you select.

The Weaverline Series IV cart puts you in complete command of your feeding operation. As your Series IV cart moves into position in front of each stall, set the auger and apron-system indicator to discharge the rate of feed you desire. Then shut it off and move on to the next cow. Or if you want, lay a continuous flow of feed. Fast-flow front-end discharge with flexible deflector makes it easy to put your feed right where you want it.

No matter which of the three models you choose, you can depend on Weaverline advanced engineering design. Upkeep, time and labor saved will more than pay for the cost of a Weaverline Series IV transport cart.

PROFIT TIPS
ADD ANHYDROUS AMMONIA TO CORN SILAGE

Ammonia is an excellent NPN source for use with Corn Silage. The NPN protein generated will cost you about 6½¢ per pound of protein. The addition of ammonia will NOT increase the nitrate level of finished silage. Some of the advantages are:

- Feeds well to BEEF or DAIRY
- Has excellent palatability
- Greatly reduces feed costs.
- OK in upright or bunker silos
- Produces milk or beef efficiently

- LIME -

We offer prompt truck spreading of Martin's Ag Limestone. Apply now on Alfalfa & Fall Seedings.
